INTRODUCTION

The pageantry of college football has inspired numerous books and movies, but none truly capture the experience of being in the game like NCAA Football 12. EA SPORTS has put together the most realistic entrances, gameplay, and career mode in what is known as a video game. When you hear the crowd roar, see the 3-D grass, and feel the vibration from the Chief Osceola spear being driven into the ground you will understand why college football is a lifestyle.

Thanks to new additions to Dynasty mode and gameplay as well as a complete overhaul to Road to Glory mode, you can have your Saturday experience all season long. This strategy guide will give you not only the football concepts to dominate your friends but also the advanced tactics to take your whole game to the next level! NCAA Football 12 gives you the ability to control your franchise online. Are you ready to play like a champion?

CUSTOM PLAYBOOKS

Every team has a go-to play on crucial third downs, so what if you could compile each team's best plays for your own playbook? The Custom Playbooks feature gives you the opportunity to search through every team and formation to find all the best in NCAA Football 12.

NEW FEATURES

What formation will you add today?

Starting with a base playbook, you can compile up to 40 formations and add over 375 plays to your arsenal. You can bring your playbook online and into Dynasty mode, so make sure you spend plenty of time in practice mode before you take it on the field. Make sure to add the “five sets for success” (see the “Advanced Gameplay Strategy” chapter) to your playbook and start winning today!

PRESENTATION

Team Entrances

Look for all the new mascot additions

Even if you dislike playing at your rival's home stadium, it's worth it to check out the brand-new entrances in NCAA Football 12. Can you imagine hearing the roar of the crowd after the War Eagle tradition is unleashed at Jordan-Hare Stadium? If you're the type of gamer who loves to play only with your favorite team, this is the year to branch out. Make sure to relax with some popcorn and check out all the new team entrances in the game. You can now have the tradition of Saturday without leaving your couch.

Broadcast Camera

Now you can watch your games from the press box. With Coach mode, you can select the play and make adjustments but sit back and let the computer do the work. If your dad is a gamer but can't handle all the controls, set this beautiful mode up and allow him to be the eye in the sky. You might even be able to fool him into thinking he is watching TV—it looks that cool!

ROAD TO GLORY

If you're a football player who is looking to get back in the trenches, look no further than Road to Glory mode. Perhaps you were a running back who always thought you had what it took to play both sides of the ball? You can now play offense and defense while earning points for both positions. Is a power house school looking at you as defensive back, but you always dreamed of playing wide receiver? Tough choices will have to be made on signing day; go with the prestige or with your heart?

On his way to the house

You can now play an entire high school season and even use the Team Builder feature to make your opponents more authentic. If you can last a whole high school season and earn enough recruiting points to get the scholarship offer from the school of your dreams, be ready. Gaining stater status won't be as easy as in years past. You will need to battle for positioning and earn the trust of your coach. It won't be easy, but the harder you work and the more you develop, the better chance you have of achieving glory.

GAMEPLAY

Collision-Based Tackling

Make sure to press the new Tackle button to wrap up the QB for a big loss

The designers at Tiburon really focused on taking “suction” out of the game. This meant an overhaul to the tackling system, so that now tackles don’t start until you make contact with the ball carrier. Without suction, blocking and catching feel incredibly realistic, and gamers can get into proper position to make plays. Another thing to keep an eye on is momentum; players who are running downhill now have the advantage in one-on-one battles. Pay attention to the lunge tackle, as it can be used in desperation to make some game-saving tackles!

Dive Catching

An overthrown deep ball used to be very frustrating in NCAA Football. You would smoke your defender down the sideline only to miss the ball by two steps! I remember yelling “Lay out” at the television. Well, my screams must have worked because the developers at Tiburon added the all-new dive catch to NCAA Football 12.

Diving is not only effective, it looks awesome

Now you can lead your receiver and hold the Dive button to lay out for the football; this gives you the ability to make the big play!

Zone Defense

The Smart Zones feature in NCAA Football 12 gives you the option of playing some unique coverages. The defenders will pass off their receivers and actually follow them through their zones. You can now roll that coverage to the strong side of the field and be confident your safety will be there to knock the ball loose. Zones now play tough and give your defense a new weapon in the fight against speedy offenses.

DYNASTY MODE

With the popularity surrounding Dynasty mode in recent years, the NCAA Football team added new ways for people to get even more involved. This year the game gets even more depth jammed into an already packed game mode. Whether you’re looking to rebuild an old power or burst a new team on the national stage, Dynasty mode is for you!

Coaching Carousel

The Coaching Carousel makes its debut this year. Players can now start out as a coordinator and focus on one side of the ball only. Depending on your success, each season you will be offered new jobs.

Make sure you can take the heat

Don’t always take the first opportunity, though; make sure you know what the offering team expects out of you by checking the goals. If you’re not careful, you could walk into a new job with tons of pressure; can you handle the heat?

SuperSim

After EA SPORTS had success with online recruiting last year, the team added the ability to sim your games on the web this season. This gives the user more control over the dynasty than ever before. Now you can call plays, make substitutions, and fight for the National Championship while you relax on vacation!

Custom Conferences

Whether or not you’re a fan of the Bowl Championship Series, you now have the chance to make your own dream matchups in NCAA Football 12. The possibilities here are endless: Want to force your friend to play with a small school like Louisiana Tech and force them into the SEC? Done! If you have always dreamed of having your team play in the granddaddy of them all, the Rose Bowl, well, now you can. You can customize bowl conferences, which means your Miami of Ohio MAC champs can play in Pasadena on January 1! You now have full control of the alignment and scheduling of your dynasty, so get ready!

RUNNING MOVES

Becoming a master on the sticks is the easiest way to improve your game. In NCAA Football 12, you have multiple moves at your disposal on any given play. The first step to becoming better is to make sure you know all the buttons and corresponding moves. Next, you will start to grasp at what time and in which situation each move becomes most effective. All of these little factors add up, and soon you will be dancing your way into the end zone making your friends look foolish.

Juke

Make one sharp cut and leave the defender in the dust

The juke is one of the most dangerous moves in the game; the ability to maintain speed throughout the cut is a key element to its success. Using an RB with high agility, get into space and make the defender miss. A larger defender like a DE will have a hard time keeping up with the ball carrier's move in space. We also have the option of combining jukes back to back if we are taking on multiple defenders.

Spin

Xbox 360: Ⓞ
PlayStation 3: ●

Plant your foot and make the defender look foolish

Getting down the proper angle for unleashing a spin move is very important. The optimal time is when a defender picks up an angle on you while you're streaking down the sideline. Having this move can keep your momentum moving forward. If you use this move in traffic, immediately after your spin move cover up the ball if you see another defender. A big hit can jar the ball loose once you turn your back to your target.

Highlight Stick

Xbox 360: Up on the right thumbstick
PlayStation 3: Up on the right thumbstick

The smaller defender can't deal with a lowered shoulder

OFFENSIVE FUNDAMENTALS

The highlight stick can help take your game to the next level. First, find out if your running back has a higher elusive rating or a higher trucking rating. This will be a factor in which move is activated when you use the highlight stick. The truck move is great when you have momentum moving forward against a smaller defender. This is important for picking up crucial yards on third down. The elusive move is great for scat backs who look to use their agility to slip tackles.

Stiff Arm

Xbox 360: Ⓢ
PlayStation 3: ×

Make sure to time the stiff arm to the tackle animation

The stiff arm is one of the most aggressive moves in football. When a defender approaches you from the side, this move gives him a hand to the face. It works against any type of player; while DEs are stronger, they usually have lower tackle ratings. Safeties, on the other hand, can tackle, but they are not as strong. Always keep this move in your mind near the sideline. It's effective because you can maintain speed that won't allow other trailing defenders to catch up to you. While this move is only used a couple of times a game, it's crucial that you think of it in the right situation because it can spring you to huge gains!

Hurdle

Xbox 360: Ⓢ
PlayStation 3: ▲

Avoid trouble in the trenches

If you are running in clogged areas, especially near the goal line, remember that you have the hurdle in your arsenal. Rather than picking a different gap due to a cut-down defender, simply hop over him. This can get you into the end zone quicker and will make your offensive lineman who sealed the block happy. Be careful when using this move in traffic; if you mistime the leap you will get jacked up!

Dive

Xbox 360: Ⓢ
PlayStation 3: ■

You made it this far—go for it!

When the game is on the line and you have no option to fail, dive! Diving allows you to pick up the crucial yards needed to move the chains. Although you can't continue your run because your knee touches, sometimes the situation calls for it. When you're down by the goal line, using the dive will trigger a jump over the pile in hopes of landing in the end zone. Only dive when totally necessary because you leave yourself exposed to big hits while in the air. If the defender times the tackle right, you could lose the ball!

OFFENSIVE FUNDAMENTALS

Protect Ball

Xbox 360: (RB)
PlayStation 3: (R1)

Cover up the ball in traffic

When playing an opponent who likes to go for the strip, covering up the ball is essential. When you bust a run up the middle, make sure to hold it as soon as you sense danger. You can protect for as long as you need—although you run slower you also prevent turnovers. One specific time to use this is late in games while you are grinding down the clock. Keeping the lead is imperative, and by protecting the ball you can ensure your team keep will keep the ball in their possession.

Pitch

Xbox 360: (LT)
PlayStation 3: (L2)

Once the defender commits to the QB, pitch it!

The pitch is a great tactic that can break down defenses. Start by drawing the defender into the ball carrier; as soon as he commits to him, break the pitch outside. Knowing when to unleash it is almost as important as knowing when not to. You must be very wise when letting the ball out of your possession. A pitch into traffic or during a tackle animation can be very risky. Turning the ball over is a danger of the option game, so be careful. When you master the pitch, you become a dangerous player.

Fake Pitch

Xbox 360: (LB)
PlayStation 3: (L1)

Fool the defender and then cut it upfield

Once you have set up the pitch, try using the fake pitch to force the defender to commit to the running back. Use the fake pitch before the defender locks onto your QB. With a fast player running the option, keeping the ball and cutting it upfield is as good an option as pitching it. You don't have to risk pitching the ball outside—just make sure to cover up the rock because QBs often have lower carry ratings.

INSIDE RUNNING GAME

Pounding the rock is the key to having a balanced attack on offense. If you can commit to running the ball and chewing up chunks of yards, the defense will be forced to add extra defenders in the box. Starting up the middle is the easiest way to get your attack going. This forces the defense to pinch the line, which later will allow you to gash them outside. The defense must respect your ability to play smashmouth football. This helps open up your play action passing game and keeps the defensive ends from immediately from rushing upfield to stalk your QB. Here are some runs to get the defense on their heels.

HB Iso Run

Start your attack here

On this run, we have the fullback lead the charge into the A gap. We are looking to follow him into the second level and use his block to spring us. If he gets picked up by a lineman, we will simply try and get as many yards as possible.

Keep your eyes upfield on the lineman

We can see our line prevent the defense from getting penetration. This allows our fullback a clear lane into the second level to take on defenders. We see the defense is still balanced, so we should look to follow our blockers rather than making a cut into a different gap.

Check the second level for holes

As we reach the hole, we hold down turbo and start to get a full head of steam. At this point we are thinking ahead to which direction we are going to bust this run once we pop through the line. Our fullback is matched up against a very talented LB, so we will stay away and follow our OL to the right. He should be able to seal off his block. Once we get through traffic we will look to make one move on the safety if needed. This is the exact type of run we need to force the defense to crowd everyone inside.

HB Dive

No lead blocker here

The HB in a one-back system is on his own as far as lead blockers. His success is dictated by choosing the right hole to hit and running with a purpose. If he chooses the gap with a defender, he'd better have some very good moves because the fullback is not on the field to bail him out. The defense should be more spread out due the extra receiving threat you add to the field, but you must learn how to seek the right hole.

The LB locks eyes through the gap

While the dive is meant to be a straight-ahead run, we aren't running into trouble if we can help it. The linebacker eyes the handoff and has a clear shot through the gap. Rather than trying to run him over, we look to use the gap and put a block between us.

OFFENSIVE FUNDAMENTALS

Cut hard and don't look back

The defender loses us behind the mass of bodies in his way. We hope that he gets tangled up, but if not we are still going to pick up some decent yards. The type of running that the one-back system brings to the table is for the savvy runner. The key is to know when to try and cut back and when to just gain the easy 4 yards that the defense allows.

TIP Don't make multiple cuts; pick one hole and hit it hard.

HB Draw

There are different theories about running the ball up the middle of the field. One is to pound away, but that often draws a lot of attention. Another is to fool the defense and make them spread out, and draws bring this style of running to the table.

The defenders read pass first

At the snap, the QB drops into a passing stance, and the linemen begin to drop back like they are pass blocking. Reading this, the safeties begin to back up and get ready to defend the pass. Our RB is waiting patiently and is ready to attack the defense.

We get the ball late

Despite waiting longer to hand the ball off, there is no penetration behind the line of scrimmage. When the RB receives the ball, he has the freedom to pick a hole and get started upfield. Since the FB released to the second level, we follow his hole so we have an extra blocker.

The whole middle opens up

Our RB springs free into the second level, and once the FB engages the defender we hammer on the turbo. We are very careful about using turbo since we like to make sharp cuts. Once we pick our lane, though, we look to pick up as many yards as possible. The HB Draw is a great way to spread the defense out and frustrate them when they are thinking about the pass. Smashmouth football can be a fun way to earn yards, but draws can gash the defense and leave them scratching their heads.

FB Inside

A quick handoff keeps the defense off balance

The FB Dive is great if the defense is expecting a run to the outside. The FB is a blocker in most of our running situations; however, here we quickly hand off to the FB and let him pick up yards.

Put your head down

The FB quickly gets started upfield. As soon as the LBs see the handoff they start running downhill. We have a head start on the momentum and will look to stay straight ahead.

Cover up and fight for a few extra yards

With the linebacker approaching the FB, cover up and put your head down for some extra yards. Focus on this run in short yardage situations or if the defense becomes too preoccupied with the outside attack.

QB Blast

Spread the field and power it with your QB

By spreading out the field with five wide receivers, we can force the defense to vacate the box. This is where a mobile QB becomes effective. The QB Blast will take advantage of a team that leaves the middle of the field open by utilizing a fast QB.

Read the D and be ready for the snap

Keep your eyes on the second level and count the number of defenders. If you have the advantage in the run game look to drive forward to pick up yards.

Drive your back foot to get going upfield

As soon as you get the ball pick a hole and get running upfield. The defense will close in quickly, so look to slide or fall forward for extra yards. Your QB is very valuable, so cover up the ball or slide because you don't need to be taking unnecessary hits. The QB Blast combines the spreading of the field like the draw with powering the run forward like a dive.

QB Sneak

A QB Sneak

A powerful short yardage play

On the goal line, the QB Sneak can quickly help us pick up a TD. Since the QB doesn't waste any time handing off, we can likely get the short yardage we need.

Check the nose tackle

Take a look at the nose tackle and make sure you have the advantage in the run game. Pick whichever gap the DT can't maintain. At the snap, the center will get moving forward and we want to be right behind him. Don't waste any time moving forward; start getting momentum.

Drive the legs forward

When you cross the line of scrimmage protect the ball and lean forward. This should help you get the extra push you need and keep you safe from linebackers converging on the play. Although this play should be used sparingly, it will force the defense to make adjustments to defend it properly. When executed properly this play can gain the inches that make a difference between winning and losing.

OUTSIDE RUN GAME

Strong Power

Y Strong Power

Break it outside for big yards

The Strong Power is a run that allows you to follow the pulling guard and get to the edge of the defense. This run is a handoff and is comparable to the HB Stretch and HB Off Tackle. It hands off the ball rather than pitching it and has you attack the C gap.

Follow the guard to the edge

An initial hole is made in the middle of the line due to the guard getting out ahead to lead the charge. Don't hit this hole because a defender is likely to shoot through it unscathed. As long as you follow the play, the defender shooting in won't be able to tackle you.

Wait for him to seal the defender

As you get to the corner, the guard will be taking on a defensive back, which is a matchup he will win time and time again. If you can make the safety miss, this play can go for big yards.

Either way, running the outside of the tackles forces the defenders to be disciplined and spread themselves out. If they guess the wrong way or clog the middle, you can really hurt their confidence.

HB Toss Strong

X HB Toss Strg

This play is best to open space

If you find the defense cramming the box or lacking discipline on one side, look to toss the ball to your HB and get him into space. We like tossing it to the opposite side of where your wide receivers are lined up. They are not as strong as blockers, and if we get a man defense called against us, they take a lot of the attention with them. Sweeps work very similarly, so don't hesitate to call one if you get a similar read.

The linebacker is too late

At the snap, the linebacker is looking to bust through the A gap and lock up the run; however, the ball is quickly tossed out and he is now totally out of the play. The RB gets ready to catch the pitch and has his eyes looking upfield to the open space. Now is a good time to consider what kind of move you're going to put on the defender. Remember: A juke is good against slower defenders, while running over cornerbacks is preferable. Try to identify who might be standing in your way as you receive the toss.

Good luck catching him

Since we cleared out the right side of the field, there are no defenders staying home to take on. As our linemen seal their blocks we look to get to the edge and pick up yards. Make sure to guard the ball in your outside hand, and don't be afraid to hop out of bounds after you pick up all you can. Tosses are capable of big gains but can also lose yardage if run at the wrong time. Make sure you have a good feeling, and if not, simply audible to a more straight-ahead run.

HB Counter

X HB Counter Wk

Time to fool the defense

The HB Counter is one of the staple runs in our three-headed rushing attack. By keeping this run handy, we can quickly run to the weak side and turn the run outside. Although it takes an extra second to get going, the counter works because of the cut by the halfback.

RUNNING THE OPTION

Running the Option Style offense in NCAA Football 12 is one of the most exciting and successful play styles that a gamer can employ. While fans of the pro game may not appreciate the option attack, if used correctly it can be one of the deadliest styles around. The Option Style offense forces the defense to choose the QB or the RB. If the defense commits to the RB, simply keep the ball with your QB for a big gain. If the defense stops the QB, look to pitch the ball outside to the RB. Unless you are playing an incredibly disciplined team, the option can really stress defenses. Considering you can run an option inside or outside, and even pass, most players should learn this fundamental style in the college game.

Quick Option

The Flexbone should be the starting point of any offense looking to have a successful Option Style attack this season. At the snap, your fullback will take off in the opposite direction, and this should draw some attention from the defense.

The slotback is covered

Your slotback makes his way out to the right and behind the wide receivers, who are blocking for you. If the CB slides down to make a play, force him to make a decision. Here he tries to make a big play and guards the potential pitch man. However, the QB sees this out of the corner of his eye and decides to keep the ball.

Cut it upfield

The receivers are far downfield and the QB follows their escort into the end zone. Having a QB as a threat is paramount to the option game because he can go the distance on any given play. On our next drive, it's guaranteed the defense will be paying more attention to the QB, so we will likely look to pitch it.

Speed Option

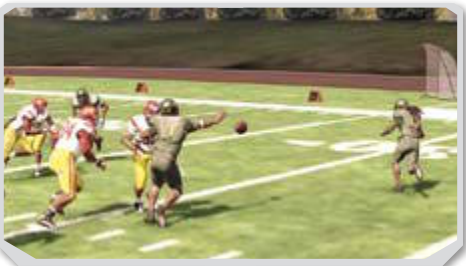

The Speed Option is especially dangerous out of the shotgun

The Speed Option works in two ways: One is out of the shotgun, where the QB takes off to the strong side and uses the RB as his pitch man. The other is as a counter to the Power Option from under center. We have no fullback blocking for us in either formation, so a pitch has a good chance of happening. Here we look at the shotgun variety and find out what makes this play so hard to defend.

Read the LB at the snap

At the snap, the QB wants to read the box. The defense is spread out due to the four-wide-receiver look; this leaves the MLB guarding both the QB and the RB. At the snap, we will break to the edge and look to draw the MLB to us.

Draw the defender and dump

The MLB does a good job of meeting the QB at the edge. However, he can choose only one player to defend and picks the ball carrier. The RB continues to swing around to the outside and the QB pitches him the ball at the last second. The RB now has open field to work with and should pick up big yards. Keeping the defense spread is essential to the Speed Option, which has become a very common play with the explosion of spread offenses in college football.

The RB sells his cut

Here the RB appears to take a step to the right; however, the guard starts to pull to the left. The initial movement by the running back can slow up linebackers and usually results in no penetration by the defense. Once you have the defense on their heels, the RB heads back left and takes the handoff. The key here is to make sure to wait for the pulling guard. He will pick up the block and you can either cut it inside or usually take it outside for a big gain.

The RB capitalizes on the misdirection

Once we see the lineman make his block, we start to hold turbo. The defenders we fooled at first should start to recover, so we want to get into as much space as possible. Do your best to squeeze through the hole and leave the defense in your dust. The counter is a run we will use even on long yardage situations because of its ability to pick up chunks of yards. For short yardage it can take a little longer to develop, so we usually don't choose it there. Once you get through the hole, get the ball in your outside arm to prevent fumbles.

Power Option

A more traditional attack

The Power Option brings the QB under center and gives him a convoy of blockers and pitchmen to work with. Here the QB has two players working as blockers and can often hold the ball longer.

The patented turn of the QB

The QB does a counterclockwise rotation and really gets running quickly. There is no misdirection element to this option; this is straight smashmouth football. Look to the FB to pick up the first block and wait for your trailing back to swing out behind the QB.

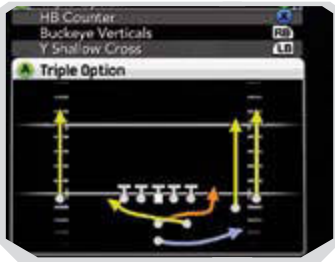

Get ready to pitch it

When the QB finally runs into a defender who is unaccounted for, that is the time to pitch it. He still has his back trailing him looking ready for a pitch. A defense that loses contain will get gashed for yards all day long. If they start to load up the strong side, don't be afraid to call the run to the opposite side with the right thumbstick. This will keep them guessing all game long.

Triple Option

- Option 1—FB Handoff
- Option 2—QB Keeper
- Option 3—Pitch to HB

The FB read makes it deadly

There are two common types of Triple Option. There is the traditional under-center kind where the QB can either fake or hand off to the FB before starting an option outside. There is also a newer shotgun variety where the QB does a read option with the FB before starting on his way outside with his other back. The key to both is making the defense freeze and respect the run up the middle.

Hold the Snap button to hand it off

At the snap, the QB must keep his eyes in the middle of the field to read the defense. If they are cheating to one side the QB should hand the ball off to the FB, who can gain big yards up the middle. The more you give it to the FB, the more it will open up outside running lanes, which can translate into big yards later in the game.

Punish them for leaving the middle open

Since the defense vacated the middle of the field, we hit them where it hurts. They were so scared of the big run to the outside that they allowed the FB to gut their defense inside. Make sure to cover up the football when running with the fullback, and always use the truck stick to pick up extra yards on impact.

Load Option Pass

Set up the pass with the regular Load Option

The Load Option is a standard play in college football. By setting up the defense, we can take control of the Load Option pass, which is one of the best ways to make big plays.

Get ready to go to the air attack

A good Load Option pass will look exactly the same as the Load Option run. This specific play has automotion, so we can call this play and just run the option run and not even think about the pass. That should get the defense running downhill.

The play starts out the same

At the snap the back is already behind the QB and ready for the option. The QB must read the middle of the field, and if he sees the safeties lose their assignment, he should plant his feet for the pass.

The wide receivers are running medium crossing patterns, which any QB should be able to complete with ease. Your WRs should have plenty of space to make plays in the open field. By calling the passing version once in a while, you force the defense to respect your team as a passing threat, and it will help keep them honest. Adding this dimension to your Option Style attack is essential to having a well-rounded game plan.

More Option Tips

- Having proper personnel is imperative to a great Option Style offense.
- A QB with a speed rating above 77 should be able to turn the corner and pick up yards to make the defense respect him as a threat. The QB must have a good carry rating and protect the ball when he goes into traffic.
- The FB position is often overlooked; however, in the Option Style offense it's a main focal point. The FB must be able to carry the ball and draw attention even when he doesn't receive the handoff. He must be a great blocker and have good speed and agility for his position.
- The two running backs in an option system should be balanced; if one is significantly better, the defense may look to key in on your stronger player. The weaker player must prove he can beat the defense or you will have a one-sided attack. RBs must have great hands to grab onto pitches and must be willing to fight for the ball if it ever comes loose.
- Wide receivers must be sure-handed and willing to block. They won't get many chances; however, when they are called upon they must make the defense pay for losing track of them. A dropped pass while wide open can deflate a team that rarely calls a pass.
- In short yardage situations use the handoff to the fullback to pick up the quick yards. He will have great momentum and is likely to fall forward. The option is capable of losing yards if the defense gets penetration; while it won't happen often look to use a faster-developing run in crucial situations.

- The person controlling the option attack must be a good decision maker and understand the value of controlling the clock to win games. Maintaining possession of the football and not making desperate pitch attempts is what separates a good option user from a great one. You will learn how to make your attack look the same including motions, handoffs, and passes. This will keep the defense on its heels while you know all along where you are headed: the end zone.

PASSING CONTROLS

Playing quarterback has been highly stylized as the most important position in football movies. It always seems that the QB is the most popular person in school. Well, all that attention can have its drawbacks. If you step out on the field and are not aware of every tool at your disposal, you are gonna take heat. Thankfully, NCAA Football 12 allows a QB who studies hard and plays the position for the love of the game to succeed. Here is everything you need to know to become a legend.

Throw to Receiver

Any time you drop back to pass, you have to press a receiver's button to pass him the ball. You can throw two types of passes depending on the situation: a bullet pass or a lob pass.

Bullet Pass

Xbox 360: A B X Y or LB

PlayStation 3: X ▲ ● ■ ● R2 L1

Hold down the button to fit it into tight coverage

A bullet pass is great for fitting the ball into a tight window. This will be your most commonly used pass; even if your WR is open, you should look to get it to him quickly so he can pick up yards after the catch.

OFFENSIVE FUNDAMENTALS

Lob Pass

Xbox 360: A B X Y or LB

PlayStation 3: X ▲ ● ■ or L1

Pop it over the blitzing player

Any time you need to air out the ball, look to use the lob pass. This requires some touch and should only be used if you have a step on the defender. Work on throwing the deep pass with different amounts of lob to master this passing style. A quick button press is key here.

Motion

Send a player in motion to get the defense thinking

Before the snap, you have the option to motion players on offense. This can help you get a read on the defense to find out if they are in man or zone. If you have a WR who is getting dominated by press coverage, this can also help free him up. Notice where the WR lines up and look to make new formations with the motion. You can only move one player on each play, so choose wisely!

Pass Lead

PlayStation 3: Left, right, up, or down on the left thumbstick

Put it where only your player can make a play on it

Lead your WR over the middle and hit him in stride

Effectively using pass lead is one way to make a drastic improvement. If you can master where to throw the ball to your receiver you will start picking up more yards. The types of throws you will consider making will fit into tighter windows. Learn how to throw high passes to bigger targets or master the art of the back shoulder throw on the sideline. Make sure your QB has a high enough accuracy rating because you can lead the ball too much at times! Make sure to protect your wide receivers over the middle; don't lead them into a big hit.

Coach Cam

Xbox 360: (RT) and move the right thumbstick up to view play art

PlayStation 3: (R2) and move the right thumbstick up to view play art

Let's go wide-screen

Double-check your routes pre-snap

Using the coach cam to double-check the defensive positioning pre-snap is one of the smartest habits you can get into. If you need to double-check your play art or want to make sure your hot routes went through, go for it. The wide view allows you to get a full view of the field and find out where the defense is weakest.

Pump Fake

Setting up a double move on the DB

Brand-new this year is the ability to pump fake to a specific receiver. This will make looking off the safety or putting a double move on the defender easier. Use the pump fake if a player is very aggressive; he should bite on the fake and leave your WR open downfield.

QB Sprint

Xbox 360: (RT)

PlayStation 3: (R2)

Roll out to make an easier throw

Rolling out the QB is a great tactic to shorten the field. With a mobile QB, you also have the option to take off if the coverage sags off. Make sure you don't roll your QB into a blitz, and always look to roll to his strong throwing side first.

Throw Away

Xbox 360: (RB)

PlayStation 3: (R1)

Don't take a sack

Knowing what button throws away the ball is crucial to saving plays. If you start to get chased down by the defender you have to know what can get you out of a bad situation. Don't risk a bad throw into coverage; get rid of the ball out of bounds and live to play another down.

QB Slide

Xbox 360: Tap X

PlayStation 3: Tap ■

Slide to avoid taking a big hit

Knowing when to slide can be the difference between keeping a drive alive or losing a momentum-changing fumble. As soon as you pick up all the yards you can, make sure to slide when the defense gets ready to lay a hit stick. A mobile QB can be your biggest weapon, so keep him protected by getting him out of bounds or sliding to safety.

General Passing Tips

- Find a formation that allows you to determine what type of coverage the defense is in.
- Use motion to get a man or zone read against the defense. This is a great pre-snap starting point.
- Know which routes are likely to open up first and learn to make progressive reads across the field.
- Look at the safeties to see their depth on the field. If you see them dropping back or sneaking up to the line, make an adjustment to your reads.
- Look at the personnel the defense has on the field; if you spread them out with five wide receivers, make sure they didn't leave linebackers on the field. Exploit any matchup advantage you have—speed, size, etc.
- Get into practice mode and run your plays against all types of defenses. If you're comfortable with a play against man coverage but can't figure out zone, then go and practice it! Find out what to look for in the defense or what play you can audible to be successful.
- Take a deep breath—your linemen will protect you and form a pocket. Relax, make a read, and deliver the ball downfield.
- Keep in an extra TE or RB to block. Many players try to spread out to avoid pressure, but by adding extra players to the line and in the backfield, we can pick up more blitzers and have time to throw downfield.

HOT ROUTES

After learning all the basic passing controls, adding hot routes to your attack will help you take the next step. Using hot routes allows the player to make quick changes to passing plays on the fly. If we read that the defense is in zone and want to make a quick flood concept, we have the tools. Adding one route to an already solid play can make some plays undefendable. Let's take a look at all the controls for hot routes in NCAA Football 12.

Streak

Xbox 360: ○, the receiver's icon, then up on the left thumbstick

PlayStation 3: ▲, the receiver's icon, then up on the left thumbstick

Send the WR deep

Streak is the most commonly called hot route. If you see a vulnerable defender or coverage, simply send the WR on a go. Also known as a fly route, it's a great way to clear out the safeties. Even if you have no intention of throwing it deep, use the WR as a decoy and pass it to the area he clears out. If you're gonna unleash the deep ball, target your fastest WR and lead him out in front. Give him a chance on the ball and nobody else. Placing all your wide receivers on streaks can make a Four Verticals concept, which can stress zones. Find where they are weak and lead your receiver upfield.

Curl

Xbox 360: ○, the receiver's icon, then down on the left thumbstick

PlayStation 3: ▲, the receiver's icon, then down on the left thumbstick

The receiver will curl in front of the defender

A curl route is a solid hot route because it can beat both man and zone coverage when used properly. Against man defense, time the throw as the WR is starting his cut. This will make sure he gets space between the ball and the defender and allow him make a possession catch. Against a zone, use the curl hot route to force the defender to choose a WR. If you mix the curl with other routes running through one area, the defense will have a hard time stopping you. Leading the ball away from the defender is key to having success with the curl route.

Out Route

Attack the sideline

The out route is most effective when run by a TE or slot receiver because they have better spacing from the sideline. Make sure he has space to haul in the catch and turn upfield. If you can get a speedy WR matched up against a linebacker, an out route can really utilize a WR's agility to make cuts. Throw the ball as he plants his feet, and always try to lead away from the defender. You can also use the out route to make your own Flood concept on the fly.

In Route

Pressure the defenders inside

The in route hasn't been as popular as the drag route over the past few seasons, but with zone making a strong resurgence, it will be back this year. Use the in route to make your own Levels concept to attack zone coverage over the middle of the field.

Fade

Xbox 360: ○, the receiver's icon, then up on the right thumbstick

PlayStation 3: ▲, the receiver's icon, then up on the right thumbstick

Lob it up

The fade route can be used in the red zone to target bigger receivers on the edge. The fade is not as powerful as in years past, but if you like to user control the WR, it may be your year. You can also look to use this unique route to attack zones, but it will take some practice to make it work consistently.

Slant In

Work to get inside position

The slant in is a classic hot route that can be used to beat the man blitz. If you see the DB slide back or shade your WR, look to bullet a pass in quickly. Make sure to lead your WR so he can catch the ball in stride and pick up yards.

Slant Out

Short Passing Game
Requirements

- A quarterback with at least an 80 speed rating.
- More strength at RB and TE than with your WR core.
- A mobile offensive line that can block directionally and get out in front on screens.
- Patience to eat the clock, make the smart throw, and score on long drives.

The short passing game was popularized in the 1980s with the development of the West Coast Offense. Coaches realized they could use short passing gains to keep the chains moving, similar to a running attack. This advent has led to multiple offenses employing the tactic, which helps take pressure off the offensive line. The QB must make quick decisions but should be able to make every throw needed to have success in this attack.

Common Short Routes
Angle

The back makes his angle cut

The angle route can be run by any player out of the backfield. He starts out like he is going to run a flat route. You have the option of hitting him before his cut if the defense is playing him inside.

Lead him out in front

The sharp cut leaves most man defenders in the dust. If we see the back get inside position, we know it's safe to deliver the ball. Make sure nobody dropped back in coverage off the line and is waiting to pick off the pass.

Secure the catch over the middle

Once we know the throw is safe we can lead the pass to the middle of the field. The angle route is one of the best ways to beat the blitz—it gives us two quick options to get rid of the football.

TIP There is a small window during the cut where your pass will fall incomplete—practice the timing!

Expecting heat from the right

Learning how to block your backs can make a good player great. Once you see the blitz, position your RB to pick up the player with a blocking hot route. You can block TEs on the line straight ahead, but only players in the backfield will step to a direction.

Smart Route

Xbox 360: , the receiver's icon, then
PlayStation 3: , the receiver's icon, then
Smart routes are great in crucial third down situations. If you need 11 yards but the curl route is only running 7, simply smart route to make the WR run to the first down marker before starting his cut. While you can't smart route every hot route, you should keep the idea in your game plan for big situations. Choose an individual WR's pass icon and then press the Smart Route button.

TIP Try smart routing pass routes from your favorite plays. This can change the angle and depth of some routes, making them unique!

THE PASSING GAME

Now that we have all the controls and hot routes down, let's take a look at two different styles of passing. Different offenses have different strengths. Find out what type benefits your team the best and look to install that type of game plan. All offenses employ some type of short passing game; these routes allow easy throws but limit the number of game-breaking plays. While only certain teams can handle the full-time downfield passing attack, every team has the ability to take a shot downfield. Let's look at the difference and see what works best for your team.

The slant out has been an extremely popular route the last few seasons. It is used as a man beater similar to the slant in, but it can also attack zone. The defenders in zone will have a hard time sliding out and covering it. Throw a high lead pass to the sideline and let the WR do the work.

Drag

Xbox 360: , the receiver's icon, then down on the right thumbstick
PlayStation 3: , the receiver's icon, then down on the right thumbstick

Drags consistently get separation

Drags are great because you can add them to any play where you read man coverage. They give your QB a great short throw option that can be completed at a high percentage. You can also add a second route to make your own Mesh concept. Try placing your RB on one as well for a unique route out of the backfield.

Bubble

The WR takes his step back at the snap

The bubble screen is used to get a dynamic receiver the ball with a chance to make a play. It is a very high percentage throw that can keep defenses honest. At the snap, the WR takes a step parallel to the line and looks to get the pass from the QB.

The QB looks to send a bullet pass down the line

As soon as the pass is secured, make sure to look at your blockers. The other WRs on your side of the field should be holding up the defenders and trying to free you up.

Follow blocks to get upfield for yards

If you have to take on a defender make sure to make one move and go. If you can slip a tackle this play can turn into a huge gain. The defense will have to respect this play and move up close to the line of scrimmage. Now we have the opportunity to beat them deep.

TIP If the throw goes backwards and is dropped, a fumble is the correct ruling, so be alert!

Curl

Anticipate his cut

Curl routes are high-percentage throws if we have a larger player who can shield off the opponent. When facing man coverage, a curl only works if your defender respects that you might run by him. With zone, a curl almost always sits in an area where the defender isn't playing. Look to mix in the curl with other routes to free up your player.

Lead the throw away from defenders

With the ability to smart route a curl, we can often use them on big third down plays. The QB must be on the same page as the WR and look to deliver the ball as he turns. If we wait too long, the defender can arrive in position to break up the play or even make an interception.

Using the body to shield the ball

The curl is essential to a short passing offense because it can beat different kinds of coverages. Find out if you prefer a speedier or a bulkier WR to run the route and practice the timing.

Drag

Read the coverage

Drags are a staple of the short passing offense. Since they cross in front of the QB, it is a very simple throw for him to make. We prefer using drags to beat man coverage, but if you have patience, they can also beat zone.

Fit the window

Any time we see an LB matched up against a faster slot WR, we look to exploit this matchup. When using a quick WR, we can make him a threat after he catches the ball.

Cut upfield for yards

The WR should trust the QB not to lead him into danger. If we use multiple drags at different depths and are able to roll the pocket to the QB's strong side, we can tear up the defense all day.

Flat

Read the position of the defender

Forcing the defense to play coverage in the flats is essential to opening up deeper passes later in the game. When facing the blitz we like to use the flat route by the halfback because it allows a safety valve for the QB.

Leak out and prepare for the pass

If the defense falls back into a Cover 4, why risk throwing a pass downfield? Simply connect on a pass to the flat and take all the yards until the defense comes up to make the tackle.

OFFENSIVE FUNDAMENTALS

Catch it in stride

If the defense does send defenders, we have fewer guys to dodge on our way to a big gain. Flats are the ultimate quick pass—take them any time the defense has a lapse.

TIP Many flat routes are “blue routes,” which allow the player to block before releasing to become a target.

The WR starts his break

Out routes allow us to start stretching the defense a bit. We can make them believe we are running past them before making a sharp cut outside. We like to throw these at a depth of at least 7 yards so we can get good value out of them.

Deliver the ball on time

The stronger your QB's arm is the more confidence you have to make this throw downfield. While we don't consider the out route to be a dangerous throw, we must be careful when throwing into zone coverage.

Keep inside position

Often we like to control the WR to make sure he goes after the ball and it can't be cut off by the defender.

Screen

Allow your blockers to get set

The HB Screen is one of the best ways to alleviate pressure from a defense. The offensive line pulls out to the sideline and the RB follows them out to the flat.

Catch the ball and look for holes

This is a high-percentage throw that can reap big rewards downfield. Make sure to hold the ball as long as possible to let everyone get set up.

Follow your convoy downfield

As soon as your RB catches the ball, treat it like a running play. Follow your blockers and weave through the defense for big yards.

Slant

The DB is giving too much cushion

A slant is very important to a short passing game. This play allows our WR to get inside position against the defense and is heavily used when facing bump-n-run.

Cut hard and get inside position

If the defense sends pressure and we can sneak past our main defender, we often have the chance to break this play all the way downfield. This play can be called to the inside or the outside, which makes the defense respect the cut either way.

Lead the WR so he catches in stride

We can also use the slant against zone coverage but must be patient. Once the WR crosses through and clears out the zone, we can deliver him a strike to lead him upfield.

The RB gets ready to leak out

This route is especially valuable on short yardage situations. The HB leaks out of the backfield before cutting to the outside. We prefer to hit him on the streak part of his route with a bullet pass. He will automatically shield the ball from the defender and give us a high-percentage catch.

Catching the bullet pass

If the defense covers his route early, he will break out to the sideline, where the QB can roll out and hit him with a pass. This has been our go-to play in short yardage and can be nearly impossible to defend.

The back tucks the ball and becomes a threat

There are multiple routes out of the backfield where you can quick pass with a high percentage. We like to use two backs and switch up which side we throw to. This can make manually defending this play a nightmare since we can easily swap sides depending on the coverage.

Deep Passing Game Requirements

- A quarterback with throw accuracy and throw power ratings over 90.
- Three players who can stretch the defense.
- Trust in your offensive line and the ability to make blocking adjustments on the fly.
- The ability to shake off a bad drive, interception, or sack.

The deep passing game contains multiple high-risk, high-reward routes and concepts. All these routes will help stretch the defense and help you make big plays. Each individual route is strong, but when combined they have the power to beat any type of defense. When you have elite talent that you know no team can match up with, this is the offense you want to run. Let's take a look at the types of routes a deep attack uses.

The WR makes a sharp cut to the sideline

The deep corner route must be used to stretch the defense away from the middle of the field. When the defense sits back in Cover 3, we must use a streak on the outside to clear the over-the-top defender. When your WR cuts you want to unleash a pass towards the sideline where only your WR can catch it.

He cuts off the pass

The depth on a deep corner should be 12–15 yards, and it should be thrown most often out of the shotgun. Your QB will take a full drop and wait for the route to develop.

He keeps his feet in bounds

On this specific play, the WR uses his large frame to go up and cut off the defender. We like throwing to the sideline because an overthrow is simply an incompletion as opposed to a turnover. If the defense is in Cover 4, look to hit the WR at a shorter depth because the deep corner will draw attention.

Deep Cross

Getting behind the defender

The deep cross is one of our favorite deep routes to call. It stresses the defense in the middle of the field and can beat both zone and man coverage. We love the cut the WR makes and his ability to burn his defender.

The WR is starting his break

Once you see the defender get beaten, you know you have a window to bullet a throw. Try to lead the WR upfield. The deep cross starts around 12 yards and runs at an angle up the field. When used with other vertical routes, it really puts pressure on the defense.

Lead the ball

On this play, the WR will be able to pick up big yards after the catch. The defense tried to use a linebacker to cover over the middle of the field, but he was no match for our talented WR and the deep cross.

Deep Out

Start with a fake inside

The concept of the deep out does not change much from the short throw section; however, our QB really makes this play stand out. Since a deep passing attack requires a QB with a rocket arm, we can throw this route at any depth. By smart routing this route, we can make it a threat no matter what the situation.

The receiver gets separation

The defensive back will fear your ability to run a fly route and will start to backpedal around 10 yards; this is the perfect time to cut to the sideline.

The WR hauls in the pass

The amount of time we have in the pocket dictates exactly how deep we can throw this route. We want to deliver the ball as the WR starts his break to the sideline. If we wait too long, the DB can recover and that is the only risk on this play. Using the deep out with a combination of other routes will take down any zone coverage a defense can throw at you.

Deep Post

Get inside position

The deep post has been one of the best deep plays for years. Since the WR begins to run at an angle, it takes pressure off the QB to throw a perfect strike. We simply have to put a ton of air under the ball and let the WR catch up to it.

Turn on the burners

This route runs at a great angle about 15 yards deep through the secondary. If we can maintain inside position we always have a chance to come down with the ball.

Haul the pass in

With the addition of dive catching this year, don't be afraid to let the ball loose. If the safety hesitates for even a second you should get all the spacing you need. Another great addition is the ability to pump fake to the WR as he is cutting; if you get the defense to take a false step you are likely to have a touchdown.

Streak

The receiver looks to get in the seam

The streak is the most common vertical route in the game. While many people think of it as a one-on-one battle downfield, we like to use the Four Verticals concept.

He turns his head

This places all your wide receivers on streak routes and forces the defense to spread out. If one of your receivers finds a hole in the zone, bullet the ball to him. Unless the defense is blitzing and you can lob it over the top, we like to throw hard passes to streaking WRs.

The WR cuts off the defender

Here the ball is thrown before the player gets behind the defense. The defender was afraid of getting beaten deep but backed up so far that he left a perfect cushion for us to fit a ball into. Utilizing a streak to clear out the defense will spread the field and make you a better player instantly.

Wheel

The receiver starts to the flat

The wheel route is great for beating zone coverage. Although it takes a while to develop, the wheel route is actually two routes in one. It starts out with a flat route before breaking into a streak.

Then he cuts upfield

Since the WR runs to the sideline before cutting, this route gets us into a unique position on the field. We can bullet a pass if the zone forgets to cover wide, or we can lob it if your WR sneaks behind his defender.

He goes all the way

Since the throw is always towards the sideline there is no danger of a turnover. The wheel gives us two great options and always has the threat to go for 6!

DEFENSIVE CONTROLS

With all the different styles an offense can run in NCAA Football 12, a good defense needs to be ready for anything. Here are all the controls you need to shut down the offense this year.

Audible

Xbox 360: ⓧ

PlayStation 3: ●

Set these beforehand

If you ever select a play at the Play Call screen and want to make a change pre-snap, simply use the Audible menu. This will have five pre-set defensive audibles and four quick audibles that allow you to make adjustments on the fly. If you see a vulnerability in the offense, simply call a new play to get your defense set up to make a play.

Coverage Audible

Xbox 360: ⓧ

PlayStation 3: ▲

What's the situation?

By using coverage audibles, we can make eight adjustments to the defense depending on what we see pre-snap. From this menu, we are able to back off, show blitz, man align, press, shift left, shift right, or bring the safeties up or down. These options allow us to back off against a speedy WR or press and frustrate a weaker one.

DEFENSIVE FUNDAMENTALS

Key Receiver

Xbox 360: ⓁT

PlayStation 3: Ⓛ2

If we are being gashed by a specific player, we can highlight him to send some extra attention his way. If you suspect the offense is going to run a play to a certain player, we can have extra defenders waiting for him at the snap.

Focus on their biggest threat

Tackle

Xbox 360: ⓧ

PlayStation 3: ■

Press the new button

Drive through the hit

The new collision-based tackling system is game-changing. Rather than running into the opposition to tackle, this year we press the new button to wrap up. We can even lunge at the player to make all-new types of tackles.

Strip

Xbox 360: ⓇB

PlayStation 3: Ⓡ1

Go for the turnover

Don't forget to scoop the ball

Using the Strip button is a high-risk, high-reward type of play. We can force turnovers, but the RB will have a better chance to break out of the tackle. Use the strip if you need the ball back or have extra defenders waiting behind you to clean up. If you are in a one-on-one situation, the strip can be dangerous to attempt.

Hot Route

Xbox 360: Select player, then A

PlayStation 3: Select player, then X

The ultimate control

By changing what assignment any defender is on pre-snap, we have the ability to turn any defense into an awesome one. If we think the QB might roll out of the pocket, we can change our linemen to spy or contain the QB. These eight different adjustments will quickly turn an average player into a great one.

Jump Snap

Xbox 360: Press down on the right thumbstick

PlayStation 3: Press down on the right thumbstick

Learn the cadence

When playing as a defensive lineman, gamers have the chance to predict when the QB will call hike and to scream past the offensive lineman. Although you can go offside if you make a mistake, the ability to get a fast jump off the line is very powerful to your defense.

If you are unable to get around your defender, try using the Swat button to block his passing lane. Even if you can't knock down the pass, there is a good chance you can make the QB uncomfortable. If you tip a pass up in the air, don't give up on the ball—you can still earn an interception!

Swat Ball

Xbox 360: (LB)
PlayStation 3: X

Make the safe play

Knowing when to swat the ball away and when to go for the interception separates gamers into good and great categories. When your opponent has a step on the defender, click onto him and try to swat the ball away at the last second. This tactic has saved many deep balls from going over our heads!

Strafe

Xbox 360: (LT)
PlayStation 3: (L1)

Square the hips

When playing with a defender in pass coverage, holding Strafe allows us to keep our body square to the QB. We have great lateral movement and can get in a good position to make big plays. Although we can't run quite as fast, this gives us great control over our player.

Player Lock

Xbox 360: Press down on the right thumbstick during the Pre-snap menu

PlayStation 3: Press down on the right thumbstick during the Pre-snap menu

Locking onto a defender means you control him for the entire play. This can be a solid idea if you know where the play is going. We don't recommend using this full-time, but if you have an instinct and a dominant defender, lock on and make a play.

DEFENSIVE LINE SHIFTS

All of the glory in football movies always goes to the star who scored the winning touchdown; however, the battle between the trenches is where the game is won and lost. On every play, the defensive line must hold up to the force of mammoth linemen trying to push them away. Shifting the line before the snap is one way the defense can have an advantage when the ball is snapped.

One-on-one vs. the left tackle

DEFENSIVE FUNDAMENTALS

Strengths

- Plays the weak-side inside gaps well.
- Slows down the ability to call play action to the strong side.

Weaknesses

- Allows the offense to run outside to the strong side.
- Lets the TE run free on pass plays.

Defensive Line Shift Right

PlayStation 3: (L1), then right on the left thumbstick

The TE can't block him consistently

Strengths

- Allows a DE to rush against a TE and slows him down if he runs a passing route.
- The strong-side DE can put a clamp on the option.

Weaknesses

- Leaves you vulnerable to weak-side counters.
- Lets the QB slow down your linebackers with play action fakes and roll-outs.

Defensive Line Pinch

Xbox 360: (LB), then down on the left thumbstick

PlayStation 3: (L1), then down on the left thumbstick

No chance in the middle

Strengths

- Controls the inside rushing lanes, including the A gap.
- Doesn't let the FB gash you up the middle.
- Allows linebackers to roam free behind the line.

Weaknesses

- The offense can get outside for big yards with tosses.
- Forces the defense to use an extra linebacker to hold the edge.
- You can easily lose containment on the QB if he decides to scramble.

Strengths

- Allows the DEs to start their rush upfield quicker.
- Can help contain the outside run to both sides of the field.
- Helps stop QBs from breaking the pocket on passing plays.

Weaknesses

- Forces the linebackers to play the middle of the field.
- Can allow the offense to chip away with consistent inside running.

Crash Left

Attack the left side

If we sense where the run is going or want to run a stunt, we can crash the line. Here we look to hold the edge against a possible run left.

Crash Right

Xbox 360: (LB), then right on the right thumbstick

PlayStation 3: (R1), then right on the right thumbstick

Try using different shifts combined with crashing the line to make some unique fronts. This crash helps attack the right side of the line.

Crash Down

Xbox 360: (LB), then down on the right thumbstick

PlayStation 3: (L1), then down on the right thumbstick

Send everyone to the middle

This puts tremendous pressure on the interior lineman. If we suspect a straight-ahead run on third and short, look to push the line back by crashing inside.

Crash Out

Xbox 360: (LB), then up on the right thumbstick

PlayStation 3: (L1), then up on the right thumbstick

Your DEs will wait to rush until the QB moves around.

Crashing the line outside puts your defensive ends into contains. If we are looking to keep an offense inside, we can spread the line and crash out.

DEFENSIVE FUNDAMENTALS

LINEBACKER SHIFTS

If you are losing the battle up front, linebackers are your reinforcements. By moving them around, we can create different run and pass blitzes. Since our linebackers also drop into pass coverage, it's smart to get them into position for when the ball is snapped. Here are all the ways we can shift the linebackers so they can make big plays.

The weak side is very strong

Strengths

- Linebacker has a great angle to the QB.
- Any plays to the weak side are locked up.

Weaknesses

- Allows the offense to run outside to the strong side.
- The HB has a free release to the right flat.

Linebackers Shift Right

Xbox 360: (RB), then right on the left thumbstick

PlayStation 3: (R1), then right on the left thumbstick

Take away the strong side

Strengths

- The LOLB can quickly match up in pass coverage vs. a TE or HB.
- The defense will have trouble breaking containment to the strong side.

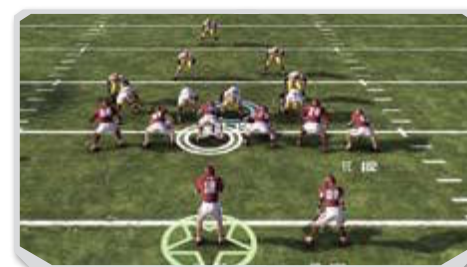

Weaknesses

- The LOLB can't recover quickly enough on weak-side runs.
- The offense can simply block the TE to make the LOLB's position void.

Linebackers Pinch Align

Strengths

- Takes away the inside run.
- Puts blitzers in the fastest gap to the QB.
- Controls short throws to the middle of the field.

- Can be burned by the QB rolling outside the pocket.

Strengths

- Allows the user to send either LB off the edge.

Quickly drop everyone in coverage

If we sense a pass and want to drop more players into coverage we can use an audible to drop everyone back. We can put all the players in different zones, including deep and hook zones. This allows us to quickly cover the middle of the field and force the QB to throw into traffic.

COVERAGE AUDIBLES

By using coverage audibles, we can line the secondary up differently on almost every play. This will make the offense uncomfortable and is one of the biggest advantages we have before the snap. If we can throw off their timing, the defense will have the edge all game.

Strengths

- Disrupts the timing of the passing game.
- Forces the QB to wait and makes him vulnerable to the pass rush.

Weaknesses

- Talented wide receivers can easily beat the coverage for large gains.
- The offense should recognize the coverage and start to utilize unbumpable routes.

Back Off

Respect the WR's talents

Strengths

- Keeps the threats in front of our defense and doesn't allow the big play.
- Can switch up coverages and use less-talented players effectively.

Weaknesses

- Allows the offense to use shorter routes to dink and dunk.
- The corners can't help support the run game.

Man Align

PlayStation 3: , then right on the left thumbstick

When you have multiple DBs on the field, use this coverage audible to make sure they line up properly when in man coverage. This will also help if the offense is using motion by keeping everything balanced.

Show Blitz

PlayStation 3: , then left on the left thumbstick

By showing blitz, we can fool the offense into thinking we are blitzing. This will move all our defenders up close to the line and cut off short throws. Use this sparingly as it leaves the defense vulnerable to the deep pass and play action game.

Shade Safeties In

Extra shading to the right

If the offense is weighted to a specific side of the field, we can shade our defenders to focus on the additional threats.

IND. DEFENSIVE HOT ROUTES

Before the snap, the defense has seven seconds to make any adjustments needed. This includes all 11 players on defense, who can be put into eight different assignments. The combinations are nearly endless, so we need to learn all of our options.

If the basic defense we select is struggling to stop the QB from rolling out, we can assign a specific defender to slow him down and contain him. Just as the offense has the ability to hot route at the line, the defense can use all its hot routes to attack. Let's take a look at each assignment and what its purpose is in NCAA Football 12.

How to Call a Defensive Hot Route

To call a defensive hot route, select the player whose assignment you want to adjust and press  on Xbox and  on PlayStation 3. Then we have the option to select:

QB Spy

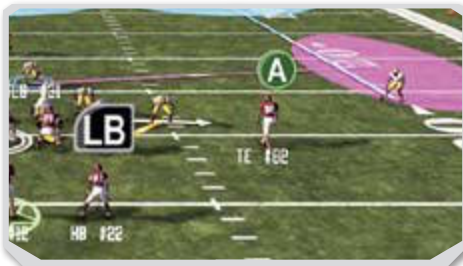

Press left on the right thumbstick

The QB Spy assigns a defender to watch the QB and follow him. If the QB attempts to take off and run, the spy will be there to stop him. We also like to use the spy with a defensive lineman to cover the short throw to the middle of the field. Make sure the player you spy has enough speed to catch the QB.

Buzz Zone

The "purple zone" does a great job of defending the sideline. It is known as a "curl to flat" because it will defend every route from a curl to a flat. It does a good job of playing deep this year and can be used to slow down pesky corner routes that players use online. You can also add your DEs on buzz zones and they will go and cover at the snap.

DEFENSIVE FUNDAMENTALS

Hook Zone

Press up on the left thumbstick

The “yellow zone” is a great way to deal with 5- to 8-yard routes. The zones do a great job of covering the middle of the field and allow us to tackle short passes after small gains. The more players we place into hook zones, the harder it will be for the QB to read the defense.

Man Coverage

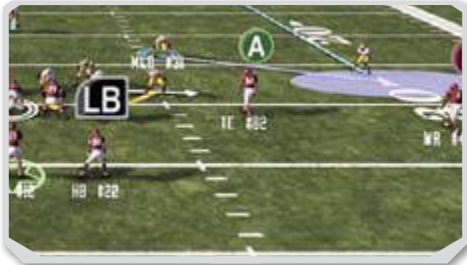

Press left on the left thumbstick and then the receiver's icon button

If we call a blitz that leaves a man unguarded, we can simply take any defender and “man him up.” If we are getting destroyed by one specific player, we can also add a second man to cover him on the play. This is a two-step hot route but one of our most valuable.

Flat Zone

Press right on the right thumbstick

Adding an extra defender to the flat is a good way to slow down the short passing game. We can also use these “light blue” zones to make the DEs go out and drop into coverage.

Blitz

Press down on the right thumbstick

By sending an additional defender on a blitz, we can hurry the QB into a bad throw. We will leave an area of the field vacated, but the added heat is often worth the risk. Notice the blitzing angle of the hot route vs. the standard blitz angle of some plays. We can make great blitzes by utilizing the playmaker.

QB Contain

Press down on the left thumbstick

A QB Contain has been one of the best adjustments in recent years. The player will loop around the edge and wait for the QB to try and break the pocket. This can be used on run plays to hold the edge. The field you are on when you call the zone affects which way the contain goes at the snap. Look to make your own line stunts with the contain.

Deep Zone

Press up on the right thumbstick

If you see your opponent looking to go long, use the “blue zone” to cover deep. This adjustment can be used in man or zone and is most effective when used on a member of the secondary.

RUN DEFENSE

Defending the run can be broken down into two primary goals: stopping the inside run and stopping the outside run. Here we show you the basics of stopping both.

Inside Run Defense

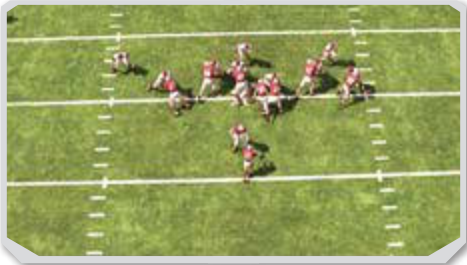

4-4 Cover 2

We like using the 4-4 because of the eight defenders in the box. If we bring the FS into the box we have nine defenders. This puts us in great position to stuff the run.

Make sure your defense looks like this pre-snap

We move the FS over the center to better match up with the offensive blockers. By doing this we will engage with all the blockers on the field.

The HB looks to cut inside

Our linebackers are in perfect position to take down the ball carrier.

Outside Run Defense

Our DE on the QB Contain is in perfect position

Against the outside run we simply hot route our DE to a QB Contain. He will break wide at the snap of the ball, forcing the HB back inside.

DEFENSIVE COVERAGES

There are two types of coverage a defense can play: man-to-man and zone. To play man, defenses need to be fast and have coverage ratings. Zone coverage tends to have slower defenders who play better in specific areas on the field.

Man Coverage

Man-to-man defense is when defenders match up with an offensive player. Their only assignment is to cover that one receiver. Typically, man-to-man defense will have two safeties playing deep coverage.

Every offensive player is matched up with a defender

2 Man Under

Here the defense is matched up in man-to-man with two deep safeties playing the deep halves of the field.

Zone Coverage

Zone defenses have defenders play areas of the field rather than a specific player. Zone defenders will let receivers run routes through their coverage because they have confidence in their teammates to defend the oncoming receiver.

Defenders play specific areas on the field

DEFENSIVE FUNDAMENTALS

Cover 2 zone

The defense here is in a Cover 2 zone. Two safeties are deep and five defenders are playing short.

BLITZING 101

When a defense blitzes the offense it typically means they are sending five or more pass rushers at the quarterback. Blitzing can be broken down into three separate styles: inside, outside, and zone blitzing. Many times defenses will play man-to-man when they blitz, but be sure to watch out for the zone blitz!

Inside Blitz

Inside blitzes bring pressure through the middle of the offensive line

Typically, when you face inside pressure you will see an alignment that looks similar to this. The defense has four defensive linemen and then two linebackers coming after the quarterback. The offense only has five offensive linemen. One of the defenders will shoot free; this is called an overload.

One of the linebackers will come in untouched

As you can see, the pressure will come from one of the linebackers. All the offensive linemen are engaged with defenders, and the center can't block both linebackers!

Outside Blitz

Outside blitzes bring pressure off the edges of the offensive line

When facing outside pressure you will see an alignment that looks similar to this picture. The defense is again trying to overload the offensive line with pressure coming off the right edge.

Here comes the blitz!

The pressure comes in off the edge and the quarterback is forced to get rid of the ball. Pressure off the edge is not as quick as inside pressure, but it is easier to generate.

Zone Blitz

The zone blitz can come from the inside or outside

When facing the zone blitz you should expect to see some type of two- or three-deep coverage with either two or three defenders playing underneath. The flats are usually a good option against the zone blitz.

Notice the defenders dropping back into their zones

The zone blitz can be difficult if you don't have your progressions in place. Know where to go with the ball against any defense.

FIVE SETS FOR SUCCESS: OFFENSE

One of the most important aspects of your game is having both an offensive and a defensive scheme. A scheme gives you an identity when playing and allows you to have consistency in your gameplan. We focus on these five sets for our offense: Power Run, Quick Pass, Compressed, Trips, and Hybrid.

Three Headed Rushing Attack: Power Run

The Power Run set focuses on the ability to run left, middle, and right on the defense. It is nearly impossible to defend against all three of these options. We also like using formations that substitute tight ends in for wide receivers. This gives us more power blocking to run over our opponent. Many times your opponent will utilize a defense that has a lot of defensive backs on the field, such as a Dime or Quarter formation. When you recognize this, audible to your Power Run set and play a smashmouth-style offense. Against this three-headed rushing attack your opponent won't be able to stop the run!

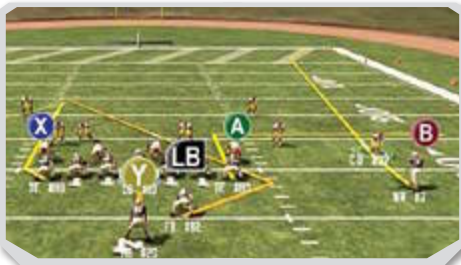

Goal Line is the ultimate Power Run set

Middle runs will be dives, isos, blasts, slams, and inside zones. Left and right runs will be tosses, sweeps, off tackles, power O's, and counters. Our favorite formula is to use a dive as our run up the middle, a toss to the right, and a counter to the left. Your quick-run audible will default to a middle run, which means that you should place only a run left and a run right in your audibles when setting them.

Quick Pass: Red Zone

A popular defensive strategy is to send pressure and when in doubt send more pressure. This style of play can be frustrating if you don't know how to combat it. The Quick Pass set is what we use when facing this defense. We like quick passes to offensive players out of our backfield. A general rule of thumb is to attack an aggressive defense from where the pressure is coming from. Routes out of the backfield allow us to attack the defense from wherever they are sending pressure.

The FB's angle route beats both outside and middle pressure

The Quick Pass set can be either a shotgun or under-center formation. However, we prefer under-center formations because they ensure no bad snaps to the QB. This allows us to have perfect timing when facing pressure from the defense. When you face pressure in NCAA Football 12, be sure to call upon your favorite quick pass formation.

Man Beater: Compressed

A Compressed set is any formation within in the game with an alignment that is tight towards the QB. Rather than having the wide receivers split out wide near the sideline, Compressed sets have these wide receivers lined up closer to each other. Many times you will see offensive players stacked close to each other within a Compressed set. The nature of these formations allows for natural picks within the passing game. This style of play is great when facing a man-to-man defense.

Ace Tight Slots has four wide receivers lined up close to the QB.

Use your Compressed set when your opponent is running a man-to-man defense. Using crossing patterns in a Compressed set is one of the best ways to attack man-to-man defense. Your reads need to be quick as there will be tons of traffic because of the close nature of the set. Compressed sets are also great to help your lower-rated wide receivers get open because of the natural picks that will occur on the field.

Zone Beater: Trips/Bunch

One of our favorite sets is the Trips set. A Trips set is any formation that has three offensive players split to one side of the field. Trips formations are ideal for attacking a zone defense. We can overload the zone with specific route combinations. Beating zone is all about spacing and attacking the zone's weak point. Using a Trips set we can combine common routes to beat any zone defense.

Ace Bunch has elements of Trips and Compressed sets.

Using a Trips set we like to initially attack the flat. We do this because we want the zone defense to be forced to play some style of Cover 2 zone to defend against our flat route. Once the defense adjusts to defend the flat we will then look to attack the weaknesses of the Cover 2 zone (corner and seam). Go back and forth with the defense as they react to what you are doing.

Base Play: Balanced/Hybrid

The last of our five offensive sets is the Hybrid. This is a combination of our other sets. It can be any mix of the other sets that helps us to attack the defense in multiple ways. One of our favorite Hybrid sets is a Trips Open formation. This formation calls for a Trips alignment to one side and an isolated wide receiver to the opposite. The isolated wide receiver is great against man-to-man situations, while our trips side is great for attacking a zone defense.

We isolate our best overall wide receiver to the right to attack man coverage and have our trips left for zone!

Hybrid sets are excellent when your opponent plays a mix of man-to-man and zone defense. We have the ability to attack the defense no matter what style they are playing. Another of our favorites is a Hybrid running set, a formation that has Power Run and Quick Pass elements. Hybrid sets are vital to the success of any offense; be sure to combine your favorites to balance out your "five sets for success"!

FIVE SETS FOR SUCCESS: DEFENSE

On defense we use these five sets: Base, Run Defense, Red Zone, Man/Zone Blitz, and X-Factor. These five sets for success will elevate your defensive game to the next level.

Base

A Base defense is one of the most important aspects of what we want to do on the defensive side of the ball. Your Base defensive set should have personnel that can stop both the run and the pass. It should also be able to call every generic defensive coverage in the game.

Cover 4 zone is the Base play we come out in.

To do this we come out in a Cover 4 zone defense. By using our quick audibles we can get to Cover 2 and 3 zones as well as 2 Man Under.

We can also quickly audible to Cover 2 zone

It's important to be able to call any generic defense so that we can respond to what the offense is doing. This gives us extreme flexibility in defending anything they might attack us with.

ADVANCED GAMEPLAY STRATEGIES

The most versatile of zones is the Cover 3

The Cover 3 zone is the most used zone in the game. It has elements to stop both the short and deep pass.

The last of our quick audible options is the 2 Man Under

The 2 Man Under calls for two deep safeties with man-to-man coverage underneath. This is a great defense to call when you are looking to gauge what the defense is doing.

Run Defense

A key element to a successful defense is stopping the offense from running the ball. One universal way to stop the run is with a Cover 3 zone from any formation with four down linemen. We like to pinch the defensive line in and then shade the secondary in as well. Next we user-control the deep FS to help aid in run support. This will keep nine defenders in the box to help ensure that the offense doesn't have the advantage in the run game.

At this point you might be wondering why we wouldn't just use a regular Cover 2 zone. The reason is, with a regular Cover 2 zone both safeties are dropping into deep zones and the cornerbacks are split wide defending the short flat. This means that four of our defenders are out of position and we only have seven for run support. Playing an inverted Cover 2 zone means that our cornerbacks are playing in the middle of the field. We still have the same coverage as a regular Cover 2 zone, but we now have nine defenders able to defend against the run!

By shading the secondary in and controlling the FS you create an inverted Cover 2 zone

Red Zone

Having an effective defense in the red zone is key to your overall defense. It doesn't matter if you give up 500 yards a game; if you can keep your opponent out of the end zone you will win more games than you will lose. In college football the red zone is the area between the defense's 20-yard line and in towards the end zone. However, in NCAA Football 12 we shorten that area and only refer to the 10-yard line and in as the red zone. We need our defense to be able to stop the run as well as send heavy pressure towards the quarterback.

We use two red zone defenses, one man-to-man and one zone

In this play we are sending six defenders towards the quarterback so that he can't sit in the pocket and make easy reads. It is important to know that in the red zone we don't need to defend against any vertical passing threat. We really only need to worry about the run and any short passing threat. With both these plays we can bring the same style of pressure against the offense but also change the coverage behind that pressure. This is important in trying to confuse our opponent into making bad decisions while in the red zone.

Man/Zone Blitz

The next element in our five defensive sets is being able to effectively blitz our opponent with both man-to-man and zone blitzes. The idea behind this is to create pressure that is exactly the same but has different defensive coverage behind it. This creates confusion for your opponent, and that is when mistakes happen.

This play is designed to bring pressure from the outside but maintain man-to-man coverage on all offensive players. The pressure will be very quick, so the offense needs to get the ball out fast. What we want to happen here is for the defense to read the pressure and then read the defensive coverage behind it. The next time we set the play up we will look to bring the same pressure but switch up to our defensive zone coverage.

Here is our man-to-man blitz

Just when the offense expects one thing we deliver something else. We are trying to coax them into making a bad decision based upon what they have previously seen. A nice option against our man-to-man blitz would be a quick pass to the halfback in the flat. If the offense checks down to this while we are in our zone blitz coverage it could result in a pick 6!

The pressure is still coming off the edge—but notice the defensive zone coverage

X-Factor

Our last defensive set is our X-Factor formation. We use this formation to mix things up defensively. This is the set we use on third and long and late in the game. Only show this formation in crucial situations throughout the game. This helps to keep the formation fresh and keep our opponent off balance.

Our favorite X-Factor formation is the 1-5-5. This formation has one defensive lineman, five linebackers, and five defensive backs. This formation gives the offense a very different look and allows us to be creative with how we apply pressure and coverage.

The 1-5-5 is the ultimate X-Factor

The QB is confused and forces a pass into coverage

Using our global hot routes we quickly blitz or drop into coverage all five of our linebackers. This is important because we can make adjustments on the fly and give exotic looks to our opponent.

The QB expected pressure; however, we only rushed one defensive lineman and dropped all five linebackers into coverage

We confused the QB enough to make him roll out of the pocket and miss his open wide receiver in the middle of the field. All five of our linebackers have dropped back into hook zones and will close in on the open wide receiver. Confusing your opponent with different looks is what the X-Factor set is all about!

PASSING CONCEPTS

Horizontal Concepts

Horizontal passing concepts are used to spread out defenses from sideline to sideline. The goal is to overload the underneath coverage with more offensive players than defenders. One of the most effective and common horizontal passing concepts is called Spacing (we will break down the Spacing concept more in the "Individual Passing Concepts" section). Each underneath receiver is looking to fill an area on the field where, in theory, there will be no defenders. Horizontal passing concepts are great at attacking defenses that expect a vertical attack.

This is a horizontal passing concept

Vertical Concepts

Vertical passing concepts spread out defenses from end zone to end zone. As an offense, if we send four receivers deep and the defense is playing a Cover 2 or Cover 3 zone we will outnumber them deep and have the advantage downfield. Four Verticals is one of the most effective vertical passing concepts (we will break down the Four Verticals concept more in the "Individual Passing Concepts" section). Vertical passing concepts are great at attacking defenses that expect a horizontal game plan.

This is a vertical passing concept

Individual Passing Concepts

In NCAA Football 12 you will notice that most plays have a similar design. The reason is that the plays in the game are all based on what you see in actual college football. Each play has individual routes, and the combination of those routes makes what we call a "passing concept." There are two primary ways to attack a defense: horizontally and vertically. In this section of the chapter we will discuss the most common passing concepts in the game!

Backs Cross

The Backs Cross concept is one of the best ways to take advantage of your speedy halfbacks in the backfield. We like to use this to attack man-to-man defensive coverages as well as the zone blitz. Look to utilize a dual half package in order to get more speed in the backfield. At the snap of the ball look to the halfbacks to make their breaks up through the offensive line. As soon as they make their breaks look for the open halfback matched up against the slower defenders. This concept is also great against the zone blitz. Against a zone blitz the halfbacks will attack the weakness of the zone and you can make the easy completion.

Bench

The Bench concept calls for quick out routes towards the sideline followed by a deep corner route over the top of the out route. The Bench concept is a high-low read. Your first read is the deep corner route over the middle of the field, followed by the out routes. This concept works against nearly all defenses in the game. Against Cover 2 and Cover 3 zones look for the corner route. Against Cover 4 zone and man-to-man coverage look for the out routes towards the sideline.

Bubble Screen

The Bubble Screen concept has a wide receiver that will break away from the line of scrimmage as well as the quarterback. No offensive linemen will pull for the screen, which helps in pass protection as the play sets up. The split end looks to block down for the wide receiver running the screen route. This play has very low risk as there are no offensive linemen pulling, exposing the quarterback to pressure. While it is low risk, this also means that the chances of a game-changing play are also low.

Cross In

Another high-low passing concept is the Cross In. The drag is our low option while the in and post routes are the high reads. The routes work off each other and help to open each specific route. The Cross In is a nice option when looking to attack the middle of a zone defense. The drag route should attract any hook zones, allowing the in route to be open behind the zone. If the hook zone defends the in route, then the drag should be open underneath as well as the post opening up over the top of the in route.

ADVANCED GAMEPLAY STRATEGIES

Curl Flats

The Curl Flats is one of the most effective passing concepts in NCAA Football 12. The idea behind this is to attack the defense horizontally. It is a very simple play to run against both man-to-man and zone defense. The design of the play attacks both sides of the field with a flat route and then a curl route. Your first read is to the flat and then to the curl route. If no defender covers the flat throw to him immediately. If the flat route is covered then the curl route should be open.

facing Cover 2 the deep safeties will typically be drawn towards the inside receivers, leaving the sideline routes open. Against Cover 3, look to the seam routes and key on the deep safety over the middle of the field. Look to see which seam he chooses to cover and then deliver the ball to your other seam receiver.

Hitch Seam

This concept is extremely effective when facing Cover 2 and Cover 4 zones. Your outside receivers run short curl routes while your slot receivers run streak routes. Against Cover 2 look for your slot receivers running streak routes to be open. Against Cover 4 look towards the outside curl routes—they will open up underneath the zone. Your last option is the underneath halfback out of the backfield. Look for him against Cover 3 and man-to-man defense.

Flood

The Flood concept stretches the zone defense vertically and typically has a backside crossing pattern for man-to-man. Your first option against zone defense is to the flat route. If the flat is covered look to the deep out route towards the sideline. The streak route should pull coverage deep, opening up the deep out underneath. Your last option is the crossing pattern for man-to-man defense. The Flood Passing concept is one of the most effective in the game.

Four Verticals

This passing concept does an amazing job of attacking Cover 2 and Cover 3 zones. The design of this play calls for four vertical routes, which will outnumber any Cover 2 and Cover 3 zones deep. When you're Levels is another high-low passing concept for attacking zone defensive coverage by sending the same route at different levels throughout the zone. The idea is to wait for the zone defender to choose which offensive receiver he will cover. Typically, the zone defender will follow the deeper pattern, so look for the underneath receiver.

Levels

Mesh

The Mesh concept is above and beyond the best way to attack man-to-man coverage. The crossing patterns over the middle of the field are where we look when facing man. Once the receivers have cleared through each other, look to deliver the pass to the receiver in the open field. Another great option is to the halfback out of the backfield. He runs a swing pattern to the short flat and can oftentimes pose major matchup problems for the defense.

Middle Screen

Another passing concept to complement our Bubble Screen is the Middle Screen. Instead of having no offensive linemen pulling, the Middle Screen calls for the center, guard, and tackle all to pull towards the wide receiver as he moves upfield after the catch. The wide receiver breaks towards the middle of the field rather than breaking towards the sideline. This play call works great against a defense blitzing from the middle of the field.

Post Corner High-Low Isolation

The Post Corner High-Low Isolation is a passing concept that once again looks to attack the defense in a manner that forces them to choose which offensive player they will defend. It also has a few nice options when facing man-to-man. Your first reads will be to the underneath flat routes; if the flat routes are covered you will then move to what the online community calls C routes. Once these routes break towards the sideline look to deliver the pass. Your last read is to the post over the middle of the field. Against any type of man-to-man coverage this is a great option!

Scissors

The Scissors passing concept specifically targets one area on the field against a defensive zone. The play calls for an inside receiver to run a corner route while the outside receiver runs a post. Both receivers will make their breaks at the same depth, forcing the deep defender to choose which receiver he will cover. If there are no safeties over the middle look for the outside post route. If a safety drops to the middle look to the corner route towards the sideline.

Seattle

Seattle is another vertical passing concept. We are trying to outnumber the defense deep with our vertical patterns. Our bunch side has one receiver running a wheel route towards the sideline, another running a deep streak, and finally a deep crossing pattern. Our solo receiver is on a streak and our halfback is on a delayed checkdown. Against Cover 3 and Cover 4 the wheel route will be open as it breaks towards the flat. Against Cover 2 and 3 look to the deep crossing pattern and the streak routes. Your last option is the checkdown to the halfback, which is a great option against man-to-man.

ADVANCED GAMEPLAY STRATEGIES

Shake

The Shake passing concept has two specific elements used to beat both man-to-man and zone defensive coverage.

Against man we have one receiver running a shake route underneath four vertical routes. The vertical routes create an overload downfield if our opponent is playing zone. This is essentially the perfect play because it beats the most common zones as well as any man-to-man defense. Make sure your best receiver is running the shake route underneath to maximize the potential of this play. Look for this play to be a staple of your offensive attack in NCAA Football 12.

Slot Outs

The Slot Outs passing concept is a man-to-man crusher. It's specifically great against the man blitz. Our outside receivers run streaks down the sideline and our inside receivers run out routes. Typically, our halfback out of the backfield will run an angle route or delayed blue route. If the defense has no safeties deep, look for the deep streaks as there is potential for the big play downfield. Against a standard man coverage look to the halfback out of the backfield as well as the out routes.

to defend against all our short options. This is also a great way to post up any man-to-man defense. Don't expect to pick up many yards, but do expect to move the chains on a consistent basis.

Spot

The Spot concept can be used for both man-to-man and zone defensive coverage. It has elements of both the Smash concept and a high-low concept. Your initial read is to the receiver running towards the flat. If he is open deliver the ball quickly to get extra yards after the catch. If it is zone coverage and the flat is covered look for the corner route to be open against Cover 2 zone. If you are facing man-to-man your spot receiver running the angled curl route will be your best option. The spot route receiver will be a bit delayed as he waits for the other receivers to clear out before he gets into his break. Deliver the pass before he turns back towards the quarterback and he will make the catch in stride as he moves upfield. You can also wait for him to post up and then deliver the pass for the gain.

Smash

The Smash concept is popular among many college and professional teams. It can beat both Cover 2 and Cover 4 zone. One of the receivers runs a short curl route while another receiver runs a deep corner behind the curl. Against Cover 2 the corner route will be open because Cover 2 is extremely weak defending the corner. Against Cover 4 the short curl will open up underneath the zone coverage because of Cover 4's inability to defend underneath patterns.

Slants Middle

The Slants Middle sends multiple receivers over the middle of the field on slant routes. This is ideal when facing zone blitzes as well as man-to-man defensive coverage. Against the zone blitz the defense will typically have one or two defenders playing over the middle of the field. This will make it extremely easy to find the open receiver when facing the zone blitz. Against man-to-man look for the inside slant receiver making his break after the snap. If he has inside position on his defender deliver the ball. If the inside slant is taken away then move towards the outside slants and once again look for inside position on the defender.

Stick

One of the most effective passing concepts in the game is the Stick concept. It attacks the defense horizontally with two flat routes and two short curls. Against zone it has a curl-to-flat passing concept. Look towards the receiver running the flat route as your primary read, and if that is covered move towards the short curl route. If the defense is in a man-to-man coverage look to the short curls posting up their man defender.

Spacing

Spacing is a passing concept that attacks a defense horizontally. When a defense catches on to our vertical passing concepts we like using Spacing. We are overloading the defense across the field underneath the coverage. Most zones won't have the defenders in the short part of the field

Texas

The West Coast offense made the Texas passing concept extremely popular for modern-day teams. A halfback out of the backfield runs an angled route while the tight end runs a streak route over the top. This concept is attacking one specific zone defender in the middle of the field. We are trying to force the zone defender to vacate the underneath coverage and follow the streaking tight end. This will leave our underneath halfback open for a quick pass out of the backfield. You can find a variety of Texas passing concepts throughout the game, and it is a staple of our offense.

Wheel Out

The Wheel Out passing concept is a yet another way to beat zone coverage. The outside receiver runs a post over the middle of the field while the inside receiver runs a wheel route towards the sideline. Against Cover 2 zone the post will be open and the wheel route will also be open as it moves up the sideline. If you face Cover 3 zone or 4 zone look to the wheel route receiver in the flat and quickly get the ball to him.

Passing Concepts Keys

- Pre-snap reads are a must. Anticipate what you expect the defense to be doing.
- Know exactly where you want to go with the ball during the play.
- After the play is done analyze your mistakes and successes.
- Respond to what the defense is doing—don't react.

Creating Passing Concepts

- Flat routes are the key to nearly every passing concept. Find plays with them and add your own elements to the mix (hot routing streaks, slants, curls, etc.).
- Always be sure to have a checkdown option in case you are fooled by the defense.
- Adjust your zone-beating passing concepts to have at least one receiver on a man-beating route.
- Isolate your zone-beating plays to one side of the field and your man-beaters to the other.

UNDERSTANDING PASS COVERAGES

The first piece of learning to read defenses in NCAA Football 12 is learning to understand the different types of coverages in the game. There are six basic coverages that a defense can call: Cover 0, Cover 1, Cover 2, Cover 3, Cover 4, and Cover 6. Except for Cover 6, the number in each represents how many defenders are protecting the deep part of the field. Here we break down the strengths and weaknesses of each coverage.

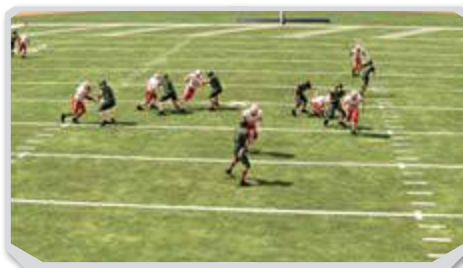

Cover 0

Cover 0 means that the defense has no defenders protecting the deep part of the field. We can assume that the defense is sending a blitz and we should expect to get rid of the ball quickly. Another thing we can assume is that the defense is playing man-to-man coverage. During your pre-snap and post-snap reads you will notice that there are no defenders dropping deep into coverage.

Cover 0 coverage

In the game you won't be able to see the defense's play art as in this picture, but use this for a reference of what a Cover 0 will look like. The pressure will be quick, so be sure to get the ball out fast.

The pressure is coming!

Notice there are no defenders in the deep secondary. If you are able to find time in the pocket, look to deliver the ball downfield to one of your receivers. The Cover 0 allows for big plays for the defense, but it also allows the offense just as many. A general rule when facing any Cover 0 defense is to assume man-to-man coverage and that the defense is sending at least two extra defenders after the quarterback.

Strengths

- Quick pressure on the quarterback.
- Creates turnover opportunities.
- Strong against play action.
- Strong against pocket passers.

ADVANCED GAMEPLAY STRATEGIES

- Strong against the run.
- Excellent style of defense for speedy secondaries.
- Excellent for indecisive opponents.
- Excellent for highly skilled user defenders.

Weaknesses

- No deep help in the secondary.
- Susceptible to giving up big plays.
- Difficult to disguise.
- Needs speed in the secondary.
- Weak against roll-out quarterbacks.
- Weak against quick passes.
- Weak against Mesh concepts.
- Weak against slants, drags, ins, and outs.

Cover 1

Cover 1 is a man-to-man defense with one of the safeties dropping back deep over the middle of the field. We know that the extra defender who would normally be playing deep is either dropping into a zone or is blitzing the quarterback. Expect quick pressure and look for your receivers down the sideline to have one-on-one matchups.

Cover 1 coverage

Notice the man-to-man defense and the one safety dropping deep over the middle of the field. You can also see that there is an extra blitzing linebacker going after the quarterback.

The deep safety drops back over the middle of the field

As with Cover 0, you should expect the pressure to be quick. Don't be afraid to take your chances downfield. Also look to your halfback out of the backfield. Another great way to attack this style of defense is with a Mesh passing concept.

Strengths

- Quick pressure on the quarterback; gives up deep coverage to send an extra defender for the pass rush.
- Deep safety help.
- Strong against play action.
- Strong against the run.
- Excellent defense for speedy secondaries.

Weaknesses

- Difficult to disguise.
- Needs speed in the secondary.
- Susceptible to giving up big plays.
- Weak against roll-out quarterbacks.
- Weak against quick passes.
- Weak against Mesh concepts.
- Weak against slants, drags, ins, and outs.

Cover 2

The Cover 2 defense has the deep part of the field split by two defenders. The safeties generally split the field in half; occasionally the Cover 2 will be inverted and the cornerbacks will split the deep half of the field. This defensive coverage is used for slower teams as well as teams with a tremendous pass rush from their defensive line. The goal is to force offensive receivers towards the sideline or the middle of the field, where the safeties will be able to recover and make a play on the ball.

ADVANCED GAMEPLAY STRATEGIES

Cover 2 zone coverage

Unlike the Cover 1 and Cover 0, the Cover 2 coverage can be both man-to-man and zone. Zone coverage calls for the cornerbacks to play the flats near the sidelines and the interior linebackers to play hook zones over the middle of the field. Man-to-man coverage calls for the same two-deep coverage, but all the cornerbacks and linebackers underneath will be matched up with an offensive player.

Cover 2 zone coverage

The middle of the field is defended extremely well, and the underneath defenders have dropped back rather than following the receivers. The deep safeties split wide, so we know the defense is in a Cover 2 zone.

Cover 2 man coverage

Notice that the defense still has the same coverage deep, but the middle of the field is now open. The defense is now in a man-to-man with two-deep coverage.

Strengths (Zone)

- Strong against horizontal passing concepts.
- Strong against Mesh concepts.
- Strong against slants, ins, and outs.
- Two deep safeties split the deep half of the field.

Weaknesses (Zone)

- Weak against Trips sets.
- Weak against floods.
- Weak against vertical passing concepts.
- Weak against corner and post routes.
- Requires an excellent pass rush.

The Cover 3 defensive coverage has three deep defenders splitting the deep part of the field, from sideline to hash, hash to hash, and hash to sideline. The standard Cover 3 typically has the two sideline cornerbacks dropping back defending the deep sidelines and one of the safeties over the deep middle of the field. The Cover 3 is a zone coverage that is one of the most used in the game. Most defensive zone blitzes will be run from this type of zone coverage.

Cover 3 can look very similar to Cover 1

Be careful when reading the deep safety. Like Cover 1, Cover 3 has one deep safety dropping over the middle of the field. You also need to look to the outside defensive backs to see if they are in man-to-man or dropping back into a deep zone. Make sure to also key in on the linebackers to see if they drop into coverage or play man-to-man.

Cover 3 coverage

As the play develops it is easier to read that the cornerbacks are dropping into their deep zones. It is also easier to see that the linebackers have dropped into their respective zones.

Strengths

- Excellent downfield coverage.
- Excellent blitz package.
- Strong in run support.
- Strong against Mesh concepts.
- Strong against slants, ins, and outs.
- Strong against corners and posts.
- Strong flat coverage.

Weaknesses

- Weak against Trips sets.
- Weak against floods.
- Weak against vertical passing concepts.
- Weak in the seams.

Cover 4

Cover 4 defenses have four defenders splitting the deep part of the field. Typically you will see both safeties and the cornerbacks drop straight back. This defense is used to prevent any deep play during the game. The defense is conceding the underneath short pass but refuses to let any receiver get behind them deep in the secondary. You can also see a four-deep zone coverage with man-to-man underneath, but this is seldom used.

Cover 4 can look like Cover 2

At the snap of the ball watch the deep safeties and see if they drop straight back. If it is a Cover 4 they will drop back just like they are playing a Cover 2. The difference is that the cornerbacks on the sideline are also dropping back to defend the deep sideline.

Cover 4 coverage

As the play develops you can see the four downfield defenders playing the Cover 4 shell. Also notice the underneath zone defenders and all the space open underneath the deep coverage.

Strengths

- Strong against vertical passing concepts.
- Strong against corners and posts.
- Balanced coverage on both sides of the field.
- Forces the offense to settle for the underneath pass.
- Bend-but-don't-break style of defense.

Weaknesses

- Weak against horizontal passing concepts.
- Weak in run support.
- Requires an excellent pass rush.
- Extremely weak in the flats.

Cover 6

The Cover 6 defensive coverage is a bit deceiving in that the “6” doesn’t represent the number of defenders deep. It is a new coverage that has been added to this year’s game, and it is an extremely effective defense to run in NCAA Football 12. The defense has elements of both Cover 4 and Cover 2 zone, hence Cover 6 (4 + 2 = 6).

One side of the field has one cornerback dropping back into a Cover 4 assignment, and the safety on that side is also dropping into a Cover 4 assignment. This means that both players are covering a quarter of the deep field. Underneath this coverage a linebacker is responsible for covering the short-side flat. The opposite side of the field is in a Cover 2 with the cornerback playing the short flat and the safety playing a Cover 2 assignment. This means that the safety is splitting one-half of the field to cover. The key to the Cover 6 depends on what hash the offense is on and also what flat your opponent likes to attack.

Cover 6 coverage

In the screenshot, notice that the ball is on the left hash of the field, also known as the short flat. This is important because wherever the short flat is dictates which side we have our Cover 4 and Cover 2 play. The Cover 4 side is weak against the flat so we want to make sure that the Cover 4 is always on the short flat and the Cover 2 plays the other. We give the offense the short flat because there is less room for the flat receiver to work with. The Cover 2 side of the field is weak in the deep secondary, but we are forcing the quarterback to make a perfect throw across the field.

All options on the field are shut down!

Notice the deep left sideline and how both defenders are in position to double-team the vertical threat. Also see that the short flat receiver has run out of space towards the sideline and our linebacker is in good position to defend. The flat to the right side of the field has the receiver covered. The offense does have a one-on-one matchup down the right sideline, but the quarterback will need to make a perfect throw on the run. When used correctly the Cover 6 is the best zone coverage in the game.

Strengths

- Appears to have every offensive option covered.
- Has the strengths of Cover 2 on one sideline.
- Has the strengths of Cover 4 on one sideline.

Weaknesses

- If used incorrectly it can spell disaster.
- Has the weaknesses of Cover 2 on one sideline.
- Has the weaknesses of Cover 4 on one sideline.

ATTACKING MAN COVERAGE

Now that you better understand defensive coverages in NCAA Football 12 we will break down how to attack these coverages. The best ways to beat man coverage are with crossing patterns and drag routes. Here are our favorite options for beating man-to-man coverage.

Compressed Formations

Shotgun Tight Slots is our favorite formation for attacking man-to-man coverage

The number one rule for attacking man-to-man coverage is to use compressed formations! The Shotgun Tight Slots formation is a compressed set that allows us to attack man coverage. The natural picks and rubs from running crossing patterns will make it easy for you to find open receivers. When we know that we are facing an opponent who likes to call a lot of man-to-man we key in on this formation. Any compressed formation in the game will be a nice option when facing man coverage.

Crossing Routes

Using crossing patterns is easily the most effective way to beat man coverage. Typically we like to run a slant on top of a drag to create depth on the field. The defense will have to get quick pressure or have some type of underneath zone to defend the crossing patterns.

One play that we like to run that has great crossing patterns is the Shotgun Tight Slots—Mesh Switch. This play has one outside receiver running an angled slant route and our other outside receiver running an underneath drag.

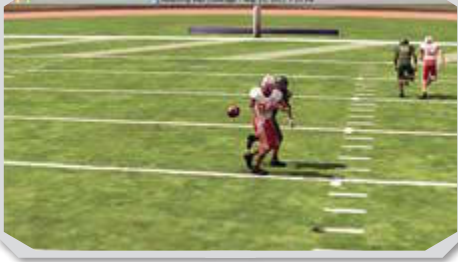

Shotgun Tight Slots—Mesh Switch

We like running crossing patterns because it gives us two options to beat man coverage. If we run just one crossing route our opponent has a better chance of stopping us. Once the ball is snapped both receivers will get open once they pass the face of the quarterback.

Both receivers have inside position on the defenders

Once our receivers have inside position we can deliver the ball in stride. After they get position is when they can get separation from their defenders. Deliver the ball with a lead pass in the direction they are running.

The pass is delivered on time for a nice gain!

We decide to deliver the ball to our receiver running the angled slant. Both receivers were open, but the angled slant had big play written all over it. The receiver hauls in the pass for a 10-yard gain.

Drag

The drag is arguably the best route in football; it gets open against any defense! It is especially effective when our receiver has a speed advantage over his defender. The play we like to highlight is the Shotgun Y-Trips—Slot Drive.

Shotgun Y-Trips—Slot Drive

We have our slot receiver matched up against a slower linebacker. This is the exact matchup we were looking for. As the play develops our receiver will get more separation.

Our receiver running the drag route is wide open

Notice that our tight end running the in route has forced the weak-side linebacker to cover our halfback out of the backfield. This has caused confusion in the man assignments, and the man defenders actually bump into each other during the play. This allows our receiver running the drag to get wide open over the middle of the field.

Screen

Any type of screen does a great job of beating man-to-man coverage. We specifically like screens to our halfback. The pulling linemen are able to outnumber the one defender covering our halfback. The halfback will run his route delayed to allow the linemen to get to pull. As soon as the linemen get into position deliver the pass to the halfback.

HB Screen

Screens can be effective from under center or in shotgun. They can also be very effective to receivers because the play develops a bit quicker.

Our halfback is off to the races

The ball is delivered to our halfback, and he has room to run. The pulling linemen are now moving into the secondary. The free safety is no match for our massive linemen. Screens have big-play potential, but be sure to watch out for defensive ends that sniff out the play and drop into coverage to defend.

Angle

Our favorite way to use angle routes is out of the backfield. The angle route has two ways to beat man coverage. The initial break out of the backfield is our first option, and when the receiver moves over the middle of the field is our second option. The angle route can be difficult to defend, especially when slower linebackers are matched up with our halfback.

HB Angle

As soon as the halfback breaks out wide of the offensive tackle you can deliver the pass. The man defender won't be quick enough to defend this. The downside is that this pass is usually completed for only a minimal gain. Our next option is to wait for the halfback to make his break towards the middle of the field. The defender won't be able to match the agility of the halfback and will be a few steps behind.

Our halfback is almost done with his cut, leaving the linebacker behind!

All we need to do now is deliver a lead pass upfield and we will be off to the races. The angle route is one of the best routes in the game and can give man-to-man defenses fits. Make sure that your halfback has a good catch rating to maximize this play's potential.

ATTACKING ZONE COVERAGES

Learning how to beat zone defenses is just as important as learning to beat man-to-man. In this section we will teach you how to beat each of the coverages that you have learned to recognize. When you think zone coverage you should immediately think Trips formations as well as overloading the zone coverage.

Trips/Bunch Formations

Shotgun 4WR Trio Str

The formation we like to use to attack zone is any Trips or Bunch formation. Here we have a Trips formation where three of our receivers are lined up to the right of the field. Any time we have a Trips alignment we can attack a zone defense and find its weakness. Typically we will run a flat route, a corner, and a streak route to find the hole in zone.

Cover 2 zone is one of the most popular coverages in all of football. However, it has never been as effective as it should be mainly because of the defense's pass rush. In NCAA Football 12 the pass rush has improved, so using teams with elite defensive linemen should help to bring back the popularity of the Cover 2.

When attacking a Cover 2 we like to use a Smash passing concept. The Smash has one receiver going deep over the middle of the field to draw the safeties in, and on the outside we have a receiver running a short curl with a deep corner route over the top. With the Smash concept we will be able to find the weakness in the zone and make the big play.

The Cover 3 zone is arguably the best zone coverage in the game. It protects the short part of the field with four defenders, and it also has three defenders deep in the secondary. Many zone blitz packages will also be used with Cover 3 zone, which makes it the most versatile zone coverage in the game.

Our spot receiver is open

The flat receiver is our first option, but the defense has him covered. Next we move to the spot receiver; he is beginning to open up. Notice that our receiver running the streak also has inside position on the deep defender.

We complete the pass and move upfield

We deliver the ball to the spot receiver and get extra yards after the catch. It's important to never commit to one receiver when facing zone. You want to make sure that you go through your progressions—that way you always find the open holes in the zone.

Our spot receiver is covered

Attacking Cover 2 zone with a Smash concept

The areas we are looking for are the deep corner and the deep middle. The defense will be defending the short flat, so our short curl will keep the attention of the defender. Meanwhile, our receiver running the corner will be wide open.

Our corner receiver is getting open

Notice how the receiver is running into wide-open space on the field. The Cover 2 zone does a great job stopping all our short reads, but it is extremely weak in the corner. We deliver the pass and make the big gain for 20 yards.

Our halfback finds space underneath the defense

Using the same play we can attack the Cover 2 zone at different points. The deep middle of the field is another great area to get open against the zone. Another nice option is the halfback out of the backfield. In this play our halfback is running a delayed curl route. He will first look to block and then release once he recognizes there is no pressure on the quarterback. Our deep routes on this play should pull the coverage deep enough so that you can squeeze the underneath pass in.

The safeties cheat in towards the underneath receiver, leaving our deep receiver open

Once you hit your opponent towards the sideline and then short underneath coverage, expect the middle of the field to open up. Here you can see the defense anticipated the pass to go to the halfback on the delayed curl; however, we have spotted our receiver over the deep middle streaking free in the secondary! The Smash concept is one of the best in the game when attacking Cover 2.

The Spot concept finds the open hole against Cover 3

When attacking a Cover 3 zone we like using the Spot passing concept from a Trips/Bunch formation. With the Spot concept we will have a receiver going straight to the flat, a corner route, and finally our main option on the slanted curl route.

We hot route our middle receiver to a streak

To better attack the Cover 3 we hot route our middle receiver on a streak. The streak will attack the seam, another weak point of the Cover 3.

In our progression we see that the flat receiver is covered, and this time our spot receiver is being covered by the zone defender. Next we move to our receiver running the streak route, and once again he has inside position on the deep defender.

The pass is squeezed in just in time!

Our last option has the ball being delivered to the seam receiver, and sure enough he is open. We deliver the pass before the defender is able to make a play on the ball. Our receiver has a high catch-in-traffic rating and we haul in the pass for the big gain!

Cover 4

Cover 4 zone is a defensive coverage that can often confuse offenses. The deep coverage is tremendous, and oftentimes looking for the big play downfield is our number one option. It also has a few defenders short who will cover underneath options. However, when you understand how to attack the Cover 4 it is extremely easy to defeat. We like to attack the Cover 4 horizontally and use the Spacing concept to do so.

We spread the defense out with our five-wide-receiver set

We come out in our 5WR Trio formation and use the Spacing concept to attack the defense horizontally. All five of our receivers are running short curls, which will overload the underneath coverage.

We have two open receivers

As the play develops we have two open receivers that the defense can't account for. All we need to do now is deliver the pass to the open receiver.

Our receiver sits in the open hole in the zone

We throw the bullet pass to the open receiver and look to move upfield right away.

Cover 6

Cover 6 is a new defensive coverage in NCAA Football 12 and will be one of the most used defenses in the game. It has elements of every defensive coverage. One side of the field has Cover 2 coverage while the other side has Cover 4 coverage. The deep coverage has three deep defenders, which is the Cover 3 element. On offense we will have one key to determine which side is Cover 2 and which is 4.

ADVANCED GAMEPLAY STRATEGIES

Cover 6 coverage

We like using the Shotgun 5WR Quad formation when facing the Cover 6. This formation is also unique in that we can really attack the defense from one side of the field as well as isolate our play-making receiver. We make sure to send two receivers deep to attack the Cover 2 zone. To read which side of the defense is Cover 2 you must read the defensive backs at the snap of the ball. If the defender drops back into a deep zone then that is the Cover 4 side. If the defender drops back into a short flat zone then that is the Cover 2 side.

We see the Cover 2 and look to target our receiver downfield

Both our underneath receivers are open, but we also know that our receiver running the streak on the right side of the field will have a one-on-one matchup with the deep defender.

Our big receiver hauls in the catch!

We have the favorable matchup in the deep secondary and look to expose the defense. The pass is delivered up high where only our receiver can make the grab.

Attacking the Cover 6 defense is all about identifying which side is the Cover 2 and which is the Cover 4. Depending on your style of offense you will need to determine which side you want to attack. If you choose to attack the Cover 2 look to go deep; if you want to go after the Cover 4 look to go short.

DEFENDING THE ONLINE PLAYER

There is no doubt about it; the ultimate test in NCAA Football 12 is taking your talents to the online community. In this section of the guide we will show you how to shut down the most used and abused plays for the upcoming season. We cover how to stop deep routes, screens, crossing patterns, routes out of the backfield, and of course the dreaded option! Learn how to lock these plays up and expect to see your win count rise!

Halfback Angle Routes

The angle route out of the backfield is without a doubt one of the most used routes in the entire game. It is very effective against both man-to-man and zone. It also has the ability to hit you at two different points. We like using the 4-4 Cover 1 but make a few key hot routes to shut down the angle route.

This is our advanced setup for the 4-4 Cover 1

Setup

- Hot route the left-of-screen DE to a QB Spy.
- Hot route the left-of-screen DT to a QB Contain.
- Hot route the right-of-screen DE to a QB Contain.
- Hot route the right-of-screen MLB to blitz.

We are looking to prevent any type of quick pass to the halfback out of the backfield. The contains will break out wide at the snap of the ball, eliminating this threat. Our next progression is to take away the halfback over the middle of the field. The spy will sit in the middle of the field and take away this option.

4-4 Cover 1 Man-to-Man

The DE doesn't allow the quick pass

Notice that the DE on the contain gets out wide enough to prevent the initial quick pass. If the offense does throw to the halfback right away there is a good chance our DE will make a play on the ball.

Our DE on the QB Spy makes the interception!

The offense decides to throw to the second option but didn't expect to see the DE drop back into a QB Spy. The pass is intercepted and the offense is left scratching their heads!

Halfback Flat Routes

We use the same setup to defend the halfback on a flat route

- Setup
- Hot route the left-of-screen DE to a QB Spy.
 - Hot route the left-of-screen DT to a QB Contain.
 - Hot route the right-of-screen DE to a QB Contain.
 - Hot route the right-of-screen MLB to blitz.

This time the offense is sending the halfback out towards the flat. Typically this is the online community's number one passing option. It is high percentage and has potential to pick up major yards after the catch. Using the same setup as we did to stop the halfback angle route we are able to defend against the halfback on the flat.

Our DE on the contain forces the early throw

The quarterback is looking to get the ball to the halfback as he breaks up the sideline. However, our DE on the contain route is not allowing the quarterback the angle that he is looking for. This forces the quarterback to get rid of the ball before the halfback is ready to make the catch.

The halfback drops the ball!

Our DE disrupted the timing of the play and the halfback ended up dropping the pass. We may not have produced major pressure or played an exotic zone, but we did make the offense feel uncomfortable. If you can disrupt the timing of the offense you will get stops when you need them!

Screens

The screen out of the backfield is one of the most frustrating plays for a defense. The pressure will be quick, but that is because the offensive line is pulling and allowing the defense to get to the quarterback. Meanwhile, the pulling linemen look to get upfield to lay crushing blocks on the defensive secondary.

We use the 4-4 Cover 1 with new adjustments to stop the screen

Setup

- Hot route the left-of-screen DE to a flat zone.

The DE is in the flat waiting for the screen

The DE will rush to the flat at the snap of the ball. He will help in shutting down the screen to the halfback. If we had not hot routed the DE to the flat zone he would have most likely rushed upfield after the quarterback. However, by hot routing him on the flat zone we know that he will shut down the screen!

ADVANCED GAMEPLAY STRATEGIES

The DE is in position and takes down the halfback

The halfback has nowhere to go because the DE and his man-to-man defender were not fooled by the screen. Make sure to note what side you assume the screen is on. If it is run to the other side of the field be sure to hot route your opposite-side DE to the flat zone.

Slants

Using the slant route to the inside is one of the most effective ways to gain positive yards in NCAA Football 12. As a defense we may not always be able to stop the inside slant, but we can most certainly slow it down. We like sticking with the same formation and showing the offense multiple looks from that formation. For stopping inside slants we like using the 4-4 Cover 3 with adjustments.

This is our advanced setup for the 4-4 Cover 3

Setup

- Hot route the left-of-screen DE to a QB Spy.
- Hot route the right-of-screen DE to a QB Spy.

Our DEs drop into QB Spy and split the middle of the field

Having both our DEs play QB Spy allows them to split the middle of the field equally. By doing this we are placing zone defenders above and below the slant routes. This makes it extremely difficult to fit passes into the small windows. Many times zones will drift from the slant routes and allow space between the quarterback and receiver. If we use a dual QB Spy we will close that space and throw off the timing of the offense.

The offense makes a bad read and the defense almost intercepts the ball

The quarterback is forced to wait for the slants to clear past the DEs but throws the ball late and almost gets the pass intercepted. If you are looking to shut down slants over the middle this is your number one option!

Crossing Patterns

The popularity of crossing patterns has caused major problems for online gamers and has caught our attention. Here's a setup for stopping crossing patterns.

We again use the 4-4 Cover 1 with adjustments for this setup

Setup

- Take the right-of-screen MLB and move him to the left of the quarterback.
- Hot route the same MLB on a buzz zone.
- Take the same MLB and move him back to the right of the quarterback.
- Hot route the left-of-screen DE to a QB Spy.

The reason we move the MLB, hot route him to a buzz zone, and then move him back is so that we can get him to run a buzz zone from right to left. If we simply hot route him to a buzz zone with his original positioning he will run his buzz zone left to right. We are trying to match up our MLB with the slot receiver. If the slot receiver runs a crossing pattern then our buzz zone defender will actually help trail the crossing pattern. The QB Spy will also help slow down any crossing patterns.

NOTE This can be a bit confusing. If you have any questions please go to primafootball.com for more in-depth information.

Our MLB is moving right to left on the buzz zone

Our QB Spy is dropping into position, which will help to slow the initial quick read over the middle of the field. Our buzz zone defender will completely shut down the crossing pattern.

Interception!

The MLB is in great position and intercepts the ball. The offense won't be accustomed to seeing these kind of setups, which will result in sacks and turnovers!

Deep Out

The timing of the deep out route is one of the toughest plays to defend, especially when the offense has it down to a science. Learning to take away this option is a must for any defense looking to get consistent stops in NCAA Football 12. We use the 4-4 Cover 3 with adjustments to shut down this popular option.

Our 4-4 Cover 3 advanced setup

Setup

- Hot route the left-of-screen OLB on a buzz zone.
- Hot route the right-of-screen OLB on a buzz zone.

ADVANCED GAMEPLAY STRATEGIES

The pass rush is coming!

We aren't expecting any crossing patterns so we decide to leave our four-man rush to get after the quarterback. The quarterback is staring down his receiver running the deep out route and our buzz zone defender is in position to make a play on the ball.

The double-team forces the incomplete pass!

The receiver is double-teamed and can't haul in the pass. The extra defender in the area disrupts the play enough to force the incompleteness.

Deep Post

One of the most effective deep routes in the game is the deep post. Expect to see online players call upon this play as a favorite throughout the season. For this breakdown we like to bring some extra pressure from the secondary and drop one of our defensive linemen to play in the deep secondary.

We again call upon the 4-4 Cover 1 to defend against the deep post

Setup

- Hot route the FS to man defend the slot receiver.
- Hot route the right-of-screen MLB to blitz.
- Hot route the right-of-screen DE to a deep zone.

The pressure is coming and our DE is dropping into coverage

The pressure is coming in quick and the quarterback is forced to get rid of the ball early. This will allow our DE to make a play on the ball.

The DE makes the interception!

Not often do you see big DEs deep downfield in coverage, but with the proper adjustments we can shut down the offense's best options on the field. Whenever you are looking to stop deep routes, dropping DEs into deep coverage will place them in better position to make plays on the ball. Safeties will play over the top of routes, but dropping linemen will have them play underneath the deep routes.

ADVANCED BLITZING TECHNIQUES

The single most important aspect in bringing pressure against your opponent is disguising what you are doing. In this section of the guide we break down how we like to fool our opponents and make them double-guess their every decision. It is also important to mix in all-out coverage into your defensive scheme to leave your opponents scratching their heads time and time again.

Here we show the same pressure but with different coverage behind it. The setups in this section use man-to-man, but it's important to know that you can use the setups for either type of defense.

Apply the same pressure but with different coverages

Pressure Right

The pressure will come from the right

- Setup
- Move both blitzing DBs closer to the line of scrimmage, just outside the DEs.
 - Hot route the left-of-screen DB to a deep route.
 - Hot route the left-of-screen DE to a QB Spy.
 - Hot route the left-of-screen DT to a contain.

The pressure is designed to come off the right edge of the offensive line. The contain will pull the weak side of the offensive line with him, allowing the pressure to sneak in off the edge. The QB Spy will protect against a quick crossing route and we will still have one defender helping in the deep secondary.

This is what the offense will see pre-snap

With every setup in this section this is what the offense will see pre-snap. They won't be able to key in on what we are trying to do defensively.

Our pressure is quick and we take down the quarterback

The quarterback didn't anticipate the pressure off the right edge and we take him down.

Pressure Left

This time we look to bring pressure off the left edge

Setup

- Move both blitzing DBs closer to the line of scrimmage, just outside the DEs.
- Hot route the right-of-screen DB to a deep route.
- Hot route the right-of-screen DE to a QB Spy.
- Hot route the right-of-screen DT to a contain.

This time we are looking to bring pressure from the left of the offensive line. Our last play we sent the pressure off the right edge so the offense should expect the pressure to come from the same place. If the offense uses slide protection the pressure will shoot off the left edge lightning quick.

The offense slide-protects right, leaving the left of the field wide open

You can see that the offense has indeed slide-protected towards the right to try and pick up the anticipated pressure. This is the cat-and-mouse game that wins championships! Make the offense think one thing and then deliver another!

Even the fastest quarterback in the game can't escape the pressure

The quarterback attempts to sprint away from the pressure, but it is too quick and he is taken down for the sack!

Max Coverage Defense

Cover 4 from the Dime formation with adjustments

Setup

- Move both DBs in the buzz zone closer to the line of scrimmage, just outside the DEs.
- Hot route the left-of-screen DE to a hook zone.
- Hot route the right-of-screen DE to a hook zone.
- Hot route the left-of-screen DT to a QB Spy.
- Hot route the MLB to a deep zone.

This setup is used to look like pressure is coming but to have complete coverage all over the field. We are actually utilizing a Cover 5 shell over the deep part of the field with five defenders short. This is the perfect coverage defense, and when it's used properly your opponent won't be able to move the ball!

The max coverage setup looks exactly the same pre-snap as our blitz packages

The offense can't tell the difference between the max coverage setup and the blitz setup. This is a major factor in the success of bringing pressure.

The quarterback drops back and all his options are shut down

At the snap of the ball the quarterback doesn't know what to do. We have been sending major pressure from both sides of the offensive line and now all of a sudden we have dropped every defender but one into coverage.

Our defender bats the ball away!

The quarterback attempts to squeeze a pass to a receiver who is double-teamed in the corner of the end zone. Our defender is in perfect position and swats the ball away!

If there is one thing we stress it is to always make your defense look the same. Use these tips and setups and find other formations in the game where you can bring pressure from man-to-man and then zone coverages. You then want to mix in your max coverage defense to put it all together. This style of defense will take your game to the next level. The number one deciding factor between a average player and an elite player is defense. This style of defense will win you championships.

ADVANCED RUN DEFENSE

Stopping the run is broken into three parts for NCAA Football 12: stopping the inside run, the outside run, and the option run. The inside and outside are very similar in how we want to stop them. The option run, however, requires a unique setup that will shut it down.

Inside Run

Defending the run is the backbone of your defense. Not being able to stop the run is one of the most frustrating things in the entire game. Stopping the run is all about balance and keeping that balance for every possible run. The formation we like using is the 4-4 and the play we use is the Cover 3 zone. In this section of the guide we break down how to stop the inside run and outside run. We will also show you how to use the 1-5-5 to lock down the option!

ADVANCED GAMEPLAY STRATEGIES

Our advanced run defense for stopping the inside run

Setup

- Shade the safeties in.
- Hot route the FS to a hook zone and control him in the box.
- Hot route the left-of-screen DT to a QB Spy.
- Move the left-of-screen MLB over the center.

We have created an inverted Cover 2 zone. The traditional Cover 2 has two deep safeties splitting the field and then two defensive backs playing the short flat. This means that there would only be seven defenders in the box to defend the run. However, by using a Cover 3 with this setup we now have nine defenders in the box to help defend the run. We even keep the same coverage on the field. The QB Spy is used in case the offense runs a pass play; we will have better pass coverage with the DT dropping over the middle of the field.

All the offensive blockers are engaged with defenders

The offense has only one remaining blocker and that is the fullback. Our weak-side linebacker is out of the play, but we have our free safety and our strong-side linebacker in position to take down the ball carrier. We have our nine defenders in the box opposed to the offense's seven. In theory there is no way the offense should be able to get positive yards. Now, amazing halfbacks will make plays and defenders will blow assignments, and that is how the offense can beat you. However, if you stick with this style of run defense you will lock down your opponent more times than not.

The halfback has nowhere to go and is taken down for no gain

The halfback can't find a hole to run through and is taken down before he can gain positive yards. Know that when you use this style of run defense you will not only be able to stop the run but you will also be in position to stop the pass. Also know that the offense will never have the number advantage over you. The max number of offensive blocks the offense can have is nine. Know this and use it as confidence for your advantage during the game!

The offense runs a play action, but our setup doesn't overcommit to stop the run

The field is covered with defenders and we aren't fooled by the play action. This setup is perfect for both the run and pass!

Outside Run

Our advanced setup for stopping the outside run

Setup

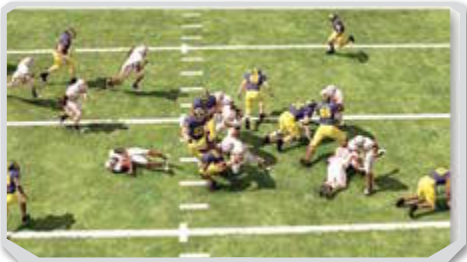

- Shade the safeties in.
- Hot route the FS into a hook zone and control him in the box.
- Hot route the left-of-screen DT to a QB Spy.
- Move the left-of-screen MLB over the center.
- Hot route the right-of-screen DE to a QB Contain.

Notice that the setup to stop the outside run is virtually the same as for stopping the inside run. The only difference is placing our DE on a QB Contain. The goal here is to have the DE break out wider than normal so he can set the edge. Setting the edge means he doesn't allow the run to get outside of him. His objective is to push the run back towards the middle of the field. Any time you are playing the outside run you always want to push it back towards the middle of the field. If the runner does break outside look to push him towards the sideline.

The halfback takes a wider angle to break outside the QB Contain

The QB Contain wasn't able to prevent the halfback from getting outside, but he did alter the direction the HB could take to get there. The halfback was forced out wider, which allowed our other defenders more time to recover and make a play on the ball.

We gobble the halfback up for the short gain

The halfback is forced back inside because of our run support on the outside. The QB Contain might not have gotten the tackle on the stat sheet, but he prevented the big run!

Option Run

The option run is an entirely new element for the defense to worry about. There are two threats: the ball carrier and the pitch man. The way we like to defend the option is with the 1-5-5 Cover 2 Sink. Our goal with our advanced setup is to keep containment on the pitch man and to drive the ball carrier up towards the middle of the field.

Setup

- Pinch the linebackers in.
- Hot route the outside linebackers to QB Contain routes and move them wide of the offensive tackles.
- Hot route the MLB to a QB Spy.
- Control the FS in the box.

The QB Contains will be responsible for keeping containment on the pitch man for both sides of the field. The QB Spy will shadow the quarterback where he goes and will help in the pursuit to take him down. You will control the FS to help clean up the play and take the ball carrier down.

Our QB Contains are keeping containment

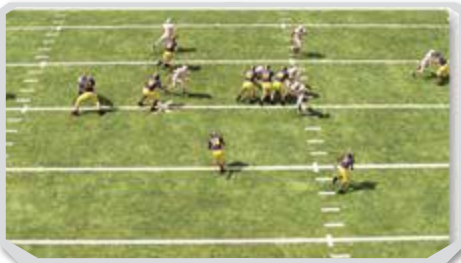

Notice that both our QB Contains are split out wide and are forcing the run back inside. Our MLB on the QB Spy is breaking towards the quarterback and will force him to make a quick decision. Meanwhile, our user-controlled player is looking to clean up the play if help is needed.

The QB tries getting the pitch off

The quarterback is forced to throw the pitch late in the play. Not only was his knee down on this play but the halfback wasn't expecting the pitch and didn't turn around in time, and the ball went out of bounds. We completely shut down the option with this defense!

The middle of the field appears to be a good place to take off against this defense; however, it will also be closed off.

The middle of the field looks open

Notice that the QB Contains still have outside containment and our MLB on the QB Spy is breaking towards the quarterback.

The hole closes quickly

The speedy quarterback can't find any running lanes and is shut down by two of our defenders. The option is locked up!

ADVANCED USER CONTROL

User-Catching

Taking control of the game with your user skill is a major asset to your offensive game plan. In this section we break down two different user-catch options in NCAA Football 12. The formation we use is the Shotgun Split Slot. However, you can use any Shotgun formation you would like as long as it has two wide receivers split out wide.

Two fades to the outside

Setup

- Hot route both outside receivers to fade routes.
- Block both running backs in the backfield.

Wait for the receiver to run about 10–15 yards downfield towards the sideline. Once he is in position throw a lead pass towards the sideline. Click on and spin the receiver back towards the quarterback. If the receiver is on the left of the field spin the receiver counterclockwise. If the receiver is on the right of the field spin him clockwise. Make sure to use the Catch/Jump button once the receiver is turned around.

We spin our receiver counterclockwise towards the quarterback

Our receiver is in position and we begin to turn him around to go up for the ball!

The receiver goes up for the user catch

The success of this user-catching depends on a few categories: the receiver's height, catch-in-traffic rating, and jump rating. If you want user-catching to play a vital role in the success of your offensive scheme make sure to find the perfect players on your team to do so. Looking at these three ratings will help you find your team's best user-catch option!

A second option for user-catching is on streaks

Setup

- Hot route both outside receivers on streaks.

We also have another option to user catch. We like using streaks deep downfield for this style. As the receiver breaks about 15 yards downfield you will throw an inside lead pass. Then click on the receiver and move him to get inside position on the defender. Once you get inside position it's all about timing. Wait for the ball to get close and hold the Catch/Jump button to go for the grab. This user catch is a much safer option and you will complete a high percentage of these.

At the snap of the ball our receiver doesn't have inside position

This is the same play but on the opposite side

We click on and move the receiver to get inside position on the defender

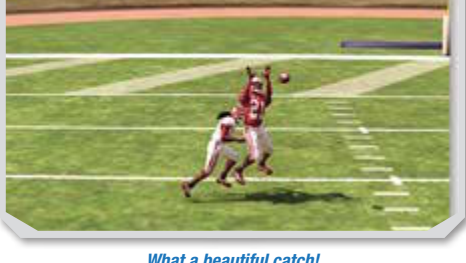

We get inside position once again!

We go up for the grab and the touchdown!

This user catch will be very effective on either side of the field. Practice makes perfect, so be sure to put time in to make this user catch a deadly part of your offense!

What a beautiful catch!

User-catching skill is a great way to take your game to the next level. This skill is for the serious player—are you up for the challenge?

Defensive User Control

The next step to becoming an elite player is to increase your user skill defensively. Here we show you how to gain “extra” defenders both in zone and man coverage. While we aren’t actually gaining extra defenders we will show you techniques that will make offenses think you have!

The FS is up in the box and “adds” an extra defender

Setup

- Hot route the left-of-screen DT on a QB Spy.
- Move the FS between the DTs.
- User-control the left-of-screen MLB.

Our goal with doing this is to mimic an extra defender on the field. By moving the FS up in the box he acts as a extra short defender if the offense runs or throws a quick pass. The FS is dropping deep into coverage already, so by moving him up into the box we gain him dropping into coverage over the short part of the field as he moves into the deep coverage.

Our FS makes the interception!

The FS in the box drops back into the short part of the field and makes a play on the ball. He makes the interception and the offense is left wondering how we got that extra defender on the field!

Man-to-man defense with pressure off the left edge

Setup

- User-control the FS covering the halfback.

With this play we have pressure coming off the left edge with our MLB dropping into deep coverage. To gain our extra defender we once again grab control of the FS. This time we need to pay attention to the halfback in the backfield. After the snap of the ball look at the halfback. If he goes out for a route you have to manually cover him with the FS. If he stays in to block you will then drop into coverage with the FS.

TIP When in man-to-man coverage the computer will often have a defender blitz if the player he is covering is assigned to block. We user-control him so that he won't just blitz and take himself out of the play.

The halfback stays in to block

Notice that the halfback has stayed in to block. We are controlling our FS in defensive coverage secondary near the right hash. The offense is looking for the slant over the middle but has to wait as our extra defender is in perfect position to make a play on the ball.

Sack!

Our “extra” defender delayed the decision of the quarterback long enough for our pressure to get to him. You have to be extremely disciplined to user-control in man-to-man defense. Covering the halfback is the easiest as he typically only runs short flat and angle routes out of the backfield!

Gaining the extra defender whether you are in man or zone is a crucial aspect of NCAA Football 12. Once you get comfortable with setting this up your defense is limitless!

User Swat vs. User Picks

What is one of the most rewarding things about NCAA Football 12? User picks! In this section of the guide we show you when to go for the user pick and when to go for the user swat. You user pick for show and you user swat for dough! The difference between the two is all about spacing and the depth of your defender. If you are trailing the receiver go for the swat. If the receiver is in front of the defender go for the user pick!

User Pick

The receiver is in front of our defender

As the ball is in the air look to strafe towards the back edge of the circle. Do this by pressing and holding the Strafe button.

Our defender is now strafing into position

Strafing means that our defender will square his hips with the line of scrimmage. Here we are approaching the back edge of the circle. Once you approach the back edge of the circle hold down the Catch button.

User pick!

We are in perfect position and make the interception. The user pick is an art form. The most important thing to remember is to always be towards the back of the circle when going for the user pick. If you can't get into position you most likely won't be able to get the user pick.

User Swat

Our defender was trailing the receiver and out of position for the user pick

Here our defender didn't have the depth as he did with the user pick. Instead of trying to be the hero we go for the safe play and look to swat the ball out of the air. As the ball approaches we hold down on the Swat button.

Incomplete pass!

Our defender swats the ball down and we live to fight another day!

Many times you will be tempted to go for the user pick, but please remember that it's just as important to not allow the big play, and going for the user swat can be just as effective for your team. Only go for the user pick when you are in perfect position!

OFFENSIVE STYLES GAME PLANNING

Here are breakdowns for all eight styles of offenses in NCAA Football 12! By using this format, we are able to unlock the “five sets for success.” As noted in the “Advanced Gameplay Strategies” chapter, these five sets for success detail different ways to attack the defense based on what coverage is read. We love to establish a ground game first—we can either go with a straight power running set or spread the defense out and run the ball. We love having a specific play to come out in that is balanced and allows us to attack any coverage. We also look to use a compressed set to get natural picks and rubs to beat man coverage. If we see zone coverage, we can audible to our Trips/Bunch set and flood the defense. If the defense appears to bring pressure, look to use your quick pass audible to make them pay. Start out with these five plays for each of the styles and slowly add plays that fit into these templates. By having your audibles set up, you will gain tremendous confidence on offense and know how to attack the defense on any play.

SHOTGUN SPREAD

Popular Teams for a Spread Offense
Oregon • Missouri • Notre Dame • TCU • Nebraska • Auburn • Clemson

The Spread offense has become very popular over the last few seasons. Whether you have the players with speed to stretch the defense or the blazing rate of play made famous by Oregon, this offense can score in droves. The Spread offense has also gained popularity due to the emphasis on exciting QB play. The scheme requires a sharp QB who can threaten the defense with his legs. Look to learn the Read Option because it can paralyze the defense and give your team more time to pick up yards. Here are five audibles to install into your Spread attack that will keep the defense off balance all game.

Running Set: Goal Line—Iso

While the Spread is known for getting multiple WRs onto the field, we still love to have a power run set to attack smaller defenses.

Pick up the tough yards

Audible down if you see the defense in Dime

While most of our runs in this offense rely on misdirection and spreading the defense, these plays can be risky in short yardage situations. Use the Iso to power straight ahead and keep driving the RB forward.

Run north and south

Here we hit the defense and gash them up the middle for a big gain. Now, hopefully they will bring more LBs on the field and we can spread them out and start our aerial attack.

Quick Pass: Shotgun Split Offset—FB Angle

By having two players in the backfield, we can either leak them out for pass routes or hot route them to stay in and block the blitzers.

Look for the FB to help beat the blitz

Sneak it past the defender

On this play the FB takes a sharp cut out of the backfield. Since the blitzing leaves him uncovered, we hit him before he cuts back towards the middle of the field. If he had a man defender, we would wait until he makes his angle cut and gets separation.

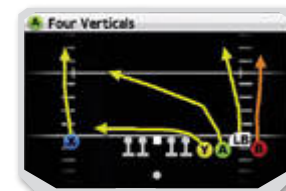

Bullet the pass inside

The back pulls in the pass and starts his cut upfield to get yards. We can utilize this play on short yardage as well since it is a high-percentage pass and has two options out of the backfield. The slot receiver does a great job clearing out the middle of the field.

Man Beater: Shotgun Quads Trio—Four Verticals

There is simply no way most defenses can hang with a Spread offense that puts all its playmakers on the field. Here the offense has too many weapons that will eventually get separation against a man defense.

Drag the left WR to create a mesh

Our WR runs at a great angle

If we can get one of our WRs matched up against a linebacker, he will get good separation. If the defense gets greedy and tries to sneak the safeties up, don't be afraid to take a shot deep to keep everything spread.

Lead the pass out in front of the WR

One benefit of the Spread offense is getting the balls to our players in space. The throw was completed downfield, but the player has a good amount of green in front of him where he can get even more yards.

Zone Beater: Shotgun Tight Flex—Crossers

Traditionally, this set is used to beat man defense. However, with all the commotion over the middle of the field, we can easily force the defender to pick one WR and hit the other with a pass.

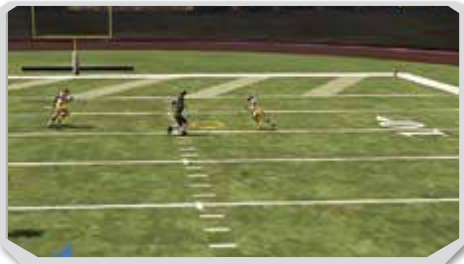

The best play in the book

The defender plays the short zone

The defender should respect the deep route, but on this play he steps up and takes the short crossing route away. If we can bullet a pass to the deep player we are in business.

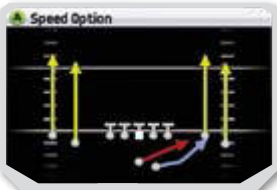

Brace for impact

The deeper the pass, the tighter the window, but our player is wide open. Look to squeeze the ball and then cover up to hold onto it in traffic.

Base Play: Shotgun Spread Flex—Speed Option

The Spread formation is a run-first type of offense. By using the option attack, we force the defense to stay true to their assignments.

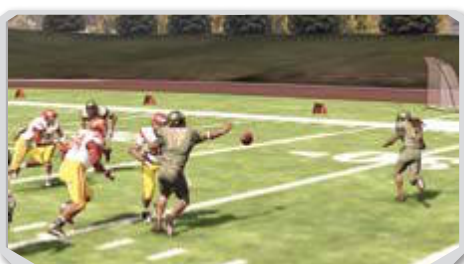

The option is a staple of the Spread attack

Read the LB at the snap

Most teams who run the Spread have a QB who can attack the defense with their legs. Here we see that the defender is guarding the middle, so we start to the outside.

Draw the defender and pitch it

Once the defense attacks the QB, we pitch the ball outside and look to gain even more yards with the RB. The option can be a risky play, but it often pays off with huge rewards. This run will keep your attack spread and keep the defense honest.

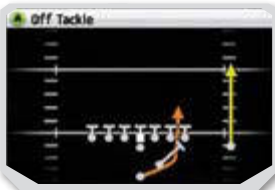

PRO STYLE OFFENSE

Popular Teams for a Pro Style Offense
Arkansas • California • Florida • Georgia • Miami • Stanford • Texas • USC • Wisconsin

The Pro Style offense is very complex; however, you can really benefit from having a smart QB under center. With the balance that this offense requires, we can really punish the defense if they are nontraditional. By utilizing different tactics of the West Coast Offense and running between the tackles, the Pro Style offense has been featured by very successful teams during the 2000s. By using the offense you see more on Sundays, a college team can compete with any opponent and dictate their game plan to the game.

Running Set: Strong Tight—Off Tackle

The Pro Style is best known for the ability to grind out drives and play a traditional style. By using a tight formation, we add an extra blocker to the formation and allow our running back to make a read.

The best running play in the playbook

Follow your blockers

We follow our lead blocker into the hole. The key to the Off Tackle is being able to take it into the B gap or hit it off tackle depending on the defense.

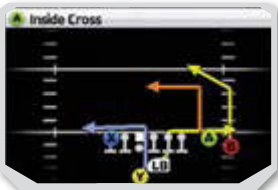

Bang it off tackle

The middle of the field attracts a cluster of defenders. Since the LB has lost containment on the edge, simply take the run outside for big yards.

Quick Pass: Strong I Twins Over—Inside Cross

The Strong I Twins Over will give a similar look to our power run set but will get a more athletic player into the game. The keys to this play are the dual routes out of the backfield.

The delayed route is a great safety valve

Wait for the back to make his cut

The back will leak through the line of scrimmage and come underneath the two routes from the receivers. When he starts to make his cut outside, bullet the pass.

OFFENSIVE STYLES

Lead the back to the outside

Keeping everything compact with the Pro Style offense means solid blitz protection and multiple plays that look the same. This makes it hard for the defense to blitz and get through because of easy recognition. Our QB should be comfortable making additional blocking hot routes for even more time in the pocket.

Man Beater: Shotgun Normal HB Wk—Inside Cross

The Inside Cross is an example of how the same play in a different formation can be used for two different purposes. Here, the formation is out of the Shotgun rather than Strong I. Look to hit the WRs who mesh over the middle.

More tight sets to toast man coverage

Our WR runs at a great angle

A perk to this play is that the WRs cross in front of the QB, making for a short throw. The QB should be able to see any danger if the defense uses the robber technique. Look to hit whichever receiver gets more separation.

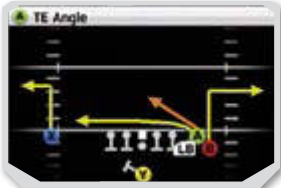

Lead the pass out in front of the WR

As the receiver hauls in the pass, you can clearly see the defenders trying to recover. By working the defense in the middle of the field, we can open up deeper routes to the outside later in the game. This will get our offense in a rhythm and keep them converting on third downs.

Zone Beater: Ace Bunch—TE Angle

By bunching our WRs together on one side of the field, we can create an overload that is impossible for zone to defend. The angle route when placed on the line of scrimmage does a great job of drawing attention from the defense.

Overload the defense

The defender plays the short zone

The defender chooses to pass off his assignment to the next zone defender, who is not quite in position yet. Make sure to bullet the ball inside, and try to use a player with a high catch-in-traffic rating.

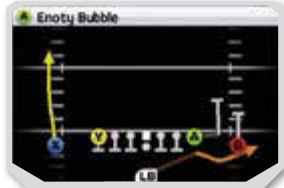

Brace for impact

The defense will close in from all angles, so make sure to cover up the ball. Next time you call this play, the defender might follow the primary target over the middle, so drill the trailing route instead.

Base Play: Ace Big—Enoty Bubble Screen

So much of the Pro Style offense is run out of heavy formations that we can catch the defense off guard by spreading it out.

This is the most effective bubble screen in the game

The WR takes his parallel step

By using a halfback with good speed, we can turn this play into a threat to go the distance. At the snap, the back leaks out and turns to catch the bullet pass from the QB.

Use the blocks to get outside

Once the back secures the football, look to see if the blocks are set up. Don't utilize turbo until your WRs get out in front. If any defender slips off his man, look to make one sharp cut and get upfield. By gaining even short yards with this play, we keep the defense on guard at all times.

MULTIPLE STYLE OFFENSE

Popular Teams for a Multiple Style Offense

Boise State • Florida State • LSU • Ohio State • Oklahoma • Penn State • Virginia Tech

The Multiple Style offense is unique because it gathers all the best formations from many different playbooks. If you are the type of player who likes to switch up your game plan and keep things interesting, Multiple Style is for you. College football is an excellent game because it has so many different styles; by selecting the Multiple Style offense, you have every type of attack at your disposal. While you don't need a fast QB, there is definitely an advantage to having a QB with some wiggle. There is a great track record of success with the teams that run this style, and if you can master this playbook, you will surely have some too!

OFFENSIVE STYLES

Running Set: Wishbone Tight—Power Option

The Multiple Style base playbook includes the Wishbone Tight, which is deep enough to run an entire scheme out of. If the defense loses any of its containment, your QB can make a read and make them pay.

The strongest option in the game

Let the blocker get out in front

On this play, the back heads through the line of scrimmage to pick up a block. The LB who is supposed to be containing the edge gets tied up inside. If he had kept containment, the QB would pitch the ball.

Get to the edge

Instead the QB keeps the ball and cuts upfield for big yards. When running with a QB, look to cover the ball and slide if you get in trouble. With a running back, stay full steam ahead until you are tackled. This is a straight power run that will force the defense to prove they can stop you.

Quick Pass: Wishbone Tight—Vertical

By staying in the Wishbone Tight formation, we can keep the defense fearful of the run. This pass play is one of the most devastating in the game because it can go quickly to either side.

Use this play to frustrate the defense

The receiver clears out the defense

The WR starts out on a vertical route that is great if we catch the defense napping. He clears out the safety and allows our RB a free lane inside. The LB sits on the back's left hip so we look to bullet a pass inside.

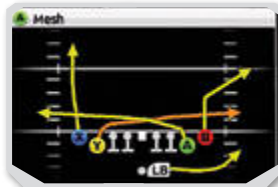

Lead the back to the inside

The receiver does a good job shielding the ball from his defender and continuing on after the catch. If the defense looks to user-control this play, you can use the mirror route on the other side.

Man Beater: Shotgun Tight Slots—Mesh

The Shotgun Tight Slots formation packs the WRs in tight to force numerous defenders into one spot on the field. Here we use a Mesh concept, which crosses our inside WRs.

The tight formation is perfect to beat man coverage

The defense gets picked off

Here the defense is in man coverage and there are five players trying to occupy one space on the field. The defense did a good job of dropping a zone over the middle, but it only causes more commotion. The QB does a good job waiting until his WR clears into open space before throwing.

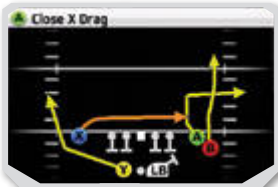

The defending LB can't match up with the receiver's speed

With our two outside WRs running deep, the deep middle is cleared for us to pick up some turf after hauling in the pass. If the safety sneaks down to help across the middle, don't be afraid to bomb one out deep.

Zone Beater: Shotgun Split Offset—Close X Drag

The right side of the formation has two WRs running together before one takes a sharp cut. This route combination often forces the LB to pick one receiver to cover since they line up so tight inside.

The inside route has two throwing windows

The defender sags off

The initial angle of the inside route allows our WR to get an inside release. Look to pass him the ball quickly—the longer you hold onto the ball against a zone, the more likely the defense is to send pressure. We can also wait until this route cuts towards the sideline because the route on the far right will pull the safety away over the top.

Put on a burst of speed

The drag from the left side of the field will fill in late and give the QB a final target on this play. If the zone follows the drag across, the RB leaking out on the wheel route is a great option.

Base Play: Ace Bunch—HB Angle

This play is all about timing; follow your progressions and make a good decision. At the snap, look over the middle of the field at the cutting WR. Look back right to check the seam before watching the HB cut back towards the middle.

There's lots of action on this play

The defender must make a quick decision.

Here you can see the stress that having multiple route combinations working the middle of the field causes. This play has a good number of cuts to beat man as well. If we sense a blitz is coming (likely from the right) we can keep our HB in to help pick it up.

We squeeze the quick pass over the middle

Overall, this play is out of a solid base formation with talented personnel on the field. We can be confident in audibling into other plays from this formation and knowing we can get completions no matter what the defense calls.

OPTION STYLE OFFENSE

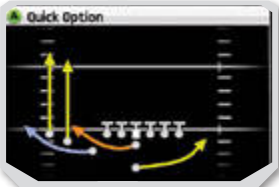

Popular Teams for an Option Style Offense
Navy • Georgia Tech • Army • Air Force

The Option Style is one of the most recognizable football offenses. It has been around for as long as football itself. There is something about utilizing the QB as a threat and driving the defense back all the way downfield. We have seen an evolution of this offense, which has expanded to the triple option, read option, and option pass, but ultimately the style works by playing awesome X's and O's football. Some option attacks rely on misdirection to fool the defense, while others will hand off to the FB for a smashmouth ground attack; our scheme will combine the best of both worlds to keep your opponent off balance. There is nothing more frustrating than thinking you have the option contained, only to have the QB pitch the ball for a trip to the house! If you can limit turnovers, control the clock, and keep the chains moving, the option can be truly unstoppable.

Once the defense spreads out wide, call the triple option and let your FB power the ball up the middle!

Running Set: Flexbone Wing Trips—Quick Option

The Flexbone is a great formation that allows you to take the run either way. On this play, misdirection is used by sending the back behind the QB out to the right. The QB rolls out to the other side and picks up the wingback as his pitch man.

The Quick Option gets us turned upfield quickly

The defender commits to the RB

Once the QB gets to the edge, he can either keep the ball or pitch it wide. Since the defensive back selects to play the RB rather than stop the QB, we hold onto the ball and turn the corner to the end zone.

Run the QB Keeper

Since nearly all option attacks have athletic QBs, look to turn on the jets and get to the end zone. Option QBs can take more hits than normal players, but don't subject yourself to any unnecessary hits, and always cover up the ball.

The quick run audible is FB Dive, which can gash defenses who cheat out wide before the snap.

Quick Pass: Wishbone Wide—Vertical

The key to the Option Style offense is making everything look the same; by using the same formation, you maintain the

There are three options out of the backfield power backfield and allow our QB to make an easy throw. Running the Option Style invites extra defenders into the box, but if you can hit quick passes it opens up the run game.

The MLB can't cover both routes

Here the defense sags back and looks to keep defenders on the edge of the field. Whichever side the defense chooses to cover, simply bullet the pass the other way.

Deliver before the cut

Since the defense is playing out by the sideline, we like to deliver the ball before our player cuts to the sideline. We can easily hit either side, and if we are patient our delayed route will release to the middle and into the cleared out space.

OFFENSIVE STYLES

Man Beater: Shotgun Spread Flex—Load Option Pass

By sticking with the option we can really gain steps on defenders who think we might run the ball. If we can force them to respect the QB for even a second, we can get great separation.

Set up the Load Option Pass

The motion is the same at the snap

With the defense in man coverage, we look to use crossing routes in front of the QB for an easy throw. Most option QBs are weak in the throw accuracy rating, so keeping throwing lanes open is key.

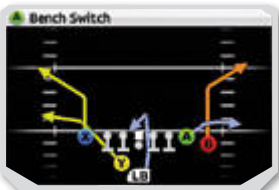

The crossing WR gets separation

One awesome feature of the Load Option Pass is to simply run the play without passing the ball. If the defense sniffs out the pass, just run the play as normal and don't press the button to bring up the passing icons.

Zone Beater: Weak I Close—Bench Switch

The Bench Switch is a great passing concept. While it's most commonly seen in the Shotgun Tight formation, the option attack uses this out of the Weak I. This gives you the option to pound the ball or attack the deep corners.

A great way to keep the threat to run alive

The DE must commit to the rolling out QB

We look to attack the corners of the defense here. By rolling out the QB, we can cut down the field and make the throw easier. The receiver blocks the DE at the snap and then releases into the flat.

Kick out the pass to the flat

Since the corner route draws a defender the underneath route is open. Draw the DE towards the QB and make a quick throw to the flat.

Base Play: Wishbone Wide—Power Option

The Power Option is a play you can run consistently to both sides of the field until the defense shows they know how to stop it. Once you master the ability to pitch the ball safely, the option becomes so powerful.

Push back the defense

A hard turn is a Power Option standard

At the snap, the QB takes a sharp cut, which allows his blockers to set up. The QB gets a nice boost and catches up quickly with his pitch man. He can either cut upfield or swing the ball outside.

Pitch the rock

Here the defender on the edge does a good job with containment. However, he quickly finds out why the option is so deadly. The QB pitches the ball and the back still has a lead blocker to lead him upfield.

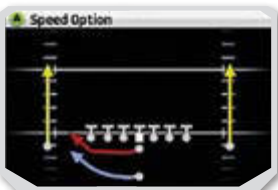

ONE BACK OFFENSE

Popular Teams for a One Back Offense
Alabama • Boston College • Idaho • UTEP • Eastern Michigan

The One Back offense looks just how it sounds—a running back lined up 5 yards behind the QB, who is under center. Since the formation doesn't utilize a lead blocker, the back must make a read quickly and either cut back or power through the hole. Learning how to run with a zone blocking scheme is the key to making this offense work. This formation does a great job of widening the line of scrimmage by adding an extra blocker to the line. The QB should have a solid amount of time in the pocket to work his reads inside out. By having WRs who are shifty and a TE who can both block and receive, this offense can be a burden to stop. Look to spread out the defense and get matchups against LBs in the slot. Alabama made this playbook very popular last season, and it looks set up to succeed in NCAA Football 12.

Running Set: Ace Big—Speed Option

With just one player in the backfield, we can easily run the Speed Option to either side of our balanced formation. Look to see if the defense is overloading one side and then quickly snap the football.

The line is balanced

OFFENSIVE STYLES

The defender makes the wrong choice

The QB doesn't have the benefit of a blocker, so he must be quick to pitch the ball to the RB. The defender on the edge should take the QB and leave the safety barreling towards the RB. Instead, the defender blows his assignment and the QB hangs onto the ball.

Earn inside position

Here the WR takes a sharp cut inside and gets the defender to trail him. With the underneath WR running a drag and clearing out his man, the middle of the field should be open. If we feel pressure on the QB, make this throw as soon as possible; otherwise wait for max separation.

They're about to collide

Our linemen do a great job of neutralizing the rush, and this gives our QB room to step up in the pocket. The WRs run at different depths but the defenders get picked off.

Work the sideline route

When the WR cuts to the sideline, the zone from the middle of the field can't recover in time. The streak on the left-hand side clears out the safety over the top and the slot WR falls in.

The QB cuts upfield

The QB turns the corner and hopes the WR can stay on his block. Since most of our other runs take place in between the tackles, it's nice to spread the defense out and work the option game.

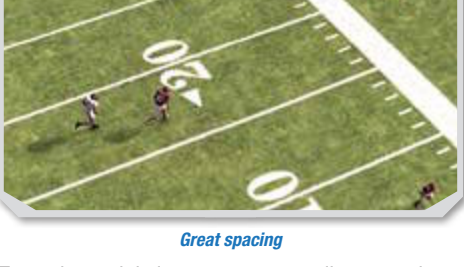

Shield the DB off the ball

This play has great progressions. Start over the middle, then move your reads to the right side of the field. We have a late-breaking route on the left side of the field that is our final read. Make sure to lead the WR so you can pick up more yards after the catch.

Gaining separation

Here, our impact running back starts to get separation from his defender. Once he hauls in the pass, he turns into the shifty running back and will be hard to tackle in the open field.

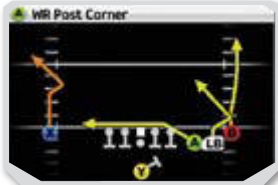

Great spacing

From the aerial view, we can see all our receivers at 10-yard depths. Depending on the coverage, the short throw will often be available; don't hesitate, and use the receivers already upfield as blockers.

Quick Pass: Ace 4WR Trips—WR Post Corner

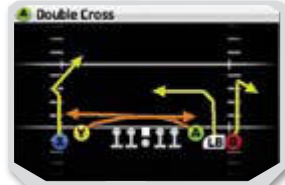

Most blitz-beating passes look to use the backs to alleviate pressure. With the one back, we have more routes on the line of scrimmage, but we still use the same concepts.

There are plenty of routes on the line

Man Beater: Empty Flex Trey Open—Double Cross

By clearing out the backfield, we look to match up a talented RB against a linebacker. Spreading out the formation can allow pressure to get in quicker, but it also gives us more options and weakens the defense.

Empty out the backfield

Zone Beater: Ace Trips—Flood

One reason the One Back offense is excellent is that we can quickly shift a WR over to create a Trips set. Instead of spreading the defense, we look to flood the defense and find the open spot in the zone.

Base Play: Ace Big—HB Counter

This zone style of run has a pulling guard for the back to follow. If we can catch the defense overloading the strong side, you can cut it back and capitalize on their over-aggression.

Master this style of run

The hole gets filled

At the snap, the guard pulls left and the back looks for a hole. Start running towards the line quickly rather than waiting for a hole to hit. As we see a hole open up, we prepare to power through it.

Get outside

As the linebacker comes up to hit the hole, we don't have a lead blocker to protect us. Instead, we cut outside and use the seal of our tackle as a way to pick up more yards.

PISTOL OFFENSE

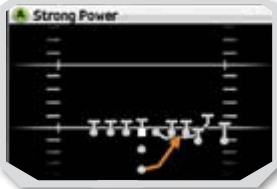

Popular Teams for a Pistol Offense
Nevada • UCLA • Northern Illinois • Duke • Ohio

The Pistol offense has gained a large amount of popularity in the last few seasons. While some teams employ this offense full-time, many teams in college football added at least one formation to their playbooks. All gamers are looking for an edge, so with the success of the Pistol offense, look to see an explosion of this style online. The Pistol offense is very recognizable because it's a hybrid of the Ace and Shotgun. The QB lines up around 4 yards behind center with the RB another 3 yards behind him. The QB gets the snap quicker than in Shotgun and can get better reads on the defense. The running game is closer to the line of scrimmage, so it is still seen as a threat by the defense. This formation can be utilized to get multiple backs and QBs big yards in the ground game.

Running Set: Pistol Jumbo Z—Strong Power

The Jumbo Z adds some extra blockers to the line of scrimmage to help create a seal outside. Look to use the pulling blockers as your lead since we don't have a fullback.

The guard pulls

The handoff is quick

The QB does a very nice turn and quickly gets the ball to the RB. The defense is unable to get penetration, and the RB heads towards the gap. The safety is approaching so the back must make a decision.

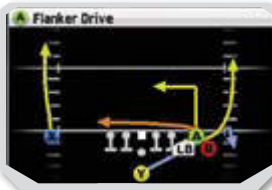

Cut it outside

The back quickly cuts outside and even has an extra blocker out in space to clean up the backside. This is a great run to attack the defense with early in the game.

OFFENSIVE STYLES

Quick Pass: Pistol Bunch—Flanker Drive

One perk of the Pistol is that the QB has more time in the pocket since he is back from the line of scrimmage. He can detect which players might be coming on the blitz and work to get the ball out fast.

This is a nice bunch to the right side

The defender respects the deep assignment

The Flanker Drive is a great concept that can often spring the receiver underneath free. The QB can dump it off to the underneath route if pressure comes, or he can hang out and let the delayed route slip underneath.

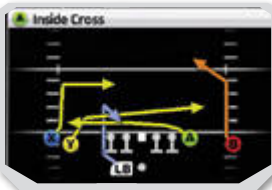

Bullet the pass in

If the defense does blitz, the wheel route on the outside can be used to win one-on-one matchups outside. The Pistol stays fairly compact, so stretching the defense vertically can be a good way to make the defense respect your passing game.

Man Beater: Pistol Slot—Inside Cross

When using a Mesh concept, the Pistol allows the QB more depth to make a good read. By having an extra delayed route, the QB gets more time in the pocket and has a safety valve.

Get an extra WR into the game

The defender gets crossed up

With most crossing plays, the defenders can't stick to their men. On this play, the defender gets crossed up and actually loses his assignment for a split second. Since we added an extra WR in the game, he won't be able to recover with the speed differential.

He's wide open

We end up delivering the ball to one of our bigger players. He should be able to pick up steam and potentially truck a safety with his momentum. One additional way to run this play is to wait for the crossers to clear the middle and sneak the ball to the RB, who slips into the vacated space.

OFFENSIVE STYLES

Zone Beater: Pistol Trio—X Spot

The Pistol still employs common football tactics despite looking a little different. By using a Bunch set, we can force the defense to show us what type of coverage it is in pre-snap. When we read the zone, we quickly dial up the X Spot.

This is a common Bunch set

Too much commotion

At the snap, the WRs all run through the same area of the field. The defender follows the route to the middle of the field and leaves the flat wide open. We see a blitzing defender coming off the edge and, as always, throw the ball right at the area he is vacating!

Look for heat off the edge

With the safety dropping back to cover the deep route, our player should rack up big yards if he can get a block. The blitz is defeated and we move the chains.

Base Play: Pistol Spread Flex—Deep Attack

Since the Pistol is often thought of as a running formation, look to spread the defense out to create mismatches. This play doesn't do anything special except provide solid routes that can consistently get open.

Spread the defense

This is a bad matchup for the D

Here we get our extra wideout matched up against a linebacker. As he cuts over the middle of the field, deliver the ball out in front of him.

Only he can get it

The wide receiver makes a great hands catch and looks for more yards. Now the defense will have to respect our passing game and can't stuff the box. The Deep Attack is a solid play and provides plenty of time in the pocket to look downfield.

RUN N SHOOT OFFENSE

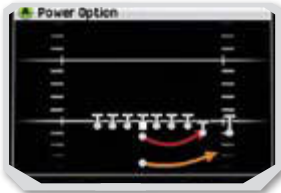

Popular Teams for a Run N Shoot offense
Hawaii • SMU

The Run N Shoot offense is a pass-heavy scheme that relies on the WRs making choices with their routes depending on the defense. For gamers who like to use motion, the Run N Shoot relies on shifts before the snap to create different looks and confuse the defense. The offense was traditionally used out of the Ace, but now the QB can also take snaps from the Shotgun. The offense will look to audible to the run if the QB counts fewer than five defenders in the box; this will force the defense to respect the ground game. The QB must make quick decisions with the offense since the fullbacks and TEs are not utilized; this leaves him vulnerable to sacks. If you have a solid offensive line and four balanced WRs, the Run N Shoot is a great offensive style!

One knock on the Run N Shoot is the lack of success inside the red zone—our run and quick pass will help shake that label.

Running Set: Goal Line Jumbo Z—Power Option

Rather than stay in a base passing set, we can catch the defense with smaller personnel on the field and overpower them.

This is a power run set

Inside or out?

If the defense stays spread out wide, look to take the option up the middle.

Pitch it at the last second

Here we get the defense moving inside and our QB kicks it out wide.

Quick Pass: Goal Line Jumbo Z—Curl Flat

If you use this quick pass down by the goal line, the defenders will not be prepared to see a compact formation.

A great concept in a unique formation

Wait for the release

If the initial flat route gets picked up to the right, progress back left and look for the delayed route out of the backfield.

Get it and go

This is a very safe throw in congested parts of the field like the red zone. Turn upfield and grab as many yards as possible.

Man Beater: Shotgun Tight—Mesh

While the Run N Shoot is considered a spread-out formation, it is well known for using drags over the middle of the field. Here is a classic Mesh concept from a compressed set that will pressure the defense in the middle.

Use four wide receivers

Make them compressed

One defender actually falls down on the play, while the other falls behind after our WR cuts hard. This will be an easy throw for your accurate QB.

The defense will be confused

The Run N Shoot has agile fast receivers who can chew up yards if they get space. This play will complement the rest of our passes that spread the defense.

Zone Beater: Ace 4WR Trips—Curl Flat Wheel

The 4WR Trips shows what stacking one side will do to a defense. We can either get a man read or overload the zone. Against this zone, the flat defender gets taken back at the snap and we deliver the ball underneath.

Quickly throw to the flats

Send two guys deep

This is a great route combo found in nearly every offense. Our speedy WR turns into a threat to go the distance on every catch. The defense should have weak tackling players on the outside as well.

Follow your blocks

Due to our QB's quick release, the WR gets the ball while blocks are still being held. Using this underneath throw will set up the defense to be beaten deep later in the game.

Base Play: Pistol Spread—60 X Option

The choice route on the left is a staple of the Run N Shoot. Depending on what coverage the defender gets, he can quickly make an adjustment. The other crossing route should beat man, while zone will get stretched by the dual vertical routes.

A common option route

Get inside position

We get a man look at the snap by using motion and seeing that the defense plays outside the routes. We have multiple options on this play now; avoid pressure with the QB and look to get the ball out.

Our talented WR wins the battle

Good teams for this scheme have great depth at WR. Most teams' fourth and fifth DBs can't match up one-on-one against our players. All our other plays in this formation have set up the spread attack the Run N Shoot is known for.

AIR RAID OFFENSE

Popular Teams for an Air Raid Offense
Arizona • Arizona State • BYU • Houston • Texas Tech • West Virginia

The Air Raid has been tremendously popular online since Texas Tech slew #1 Texas on a national stage in dramatic fashion in 2008. The running game is nearly nonexistent and instead the short pass replaces it—much like the West Coast Offense. For players who are comfortable audibling depending on how they see the defense line up, the Air Raid can be deadly. By using short screens, quick passes, and crossing concepts the Air Raid will keep defenses on their heels all game long. Most QBs who run this style put up prolific passing numbers and complete a tremendous number of their throws. These QBs must have elite accuracy and be quick decision makers. Wide receivers don't need to be elite but must catch the ball and know how to get YAC!

OFFENSIVE STYLES

Running Set: Shotgun Double Flex—Speed Option

The defense shouldn't suspect the option out of this formation. We keep the four-wideout look and take off with the QB. It should be easy to get a read since we have the D spread out.

A traditional passing set

The weak-side defensive end runs free

The defender sneaks in off the backside; however, we don't focus on him because we are running away from his area. Look to gain the edge quickly since WRs aren't as solid at blocking as TEs.

Draw and dump

Once we get the DE to commit to the QB, we pitch the ball wide and have the RB haul it in. This play can catch defenses off guard who back up too far off the line and are worried about the throwing attack.

Quick Pass: Shotgun Split Twins—Switch

The Switch play is excellent because it draws attention away from the RB, who runs a great route out of the backfield. By utilizing the Twins look, we can clear out the area and leave underneath open.

The HB route is money

Deliver it with gusto

If the defender manages to eye the RB, lead the pass inside. If the LB gets inside position, hold the ball until the route takes our defenders outside.

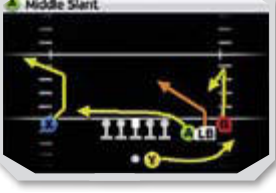

The receiver takes the top off the D

Once the back hauls in the pass, the receivers turn into blockers. If the defense pays too much attention to the left side, the TE on the right is on a solid route back across the middle, so work him into your progression.

Man Beater: Shotgun Trips—Middle Slant

While Trips sets are normally used to beat zone, this play has two man-beating routes next to each other. We can tell if the defense is in man or zone depending on how the DBs line up.

Stack the right side

Roast the D with a slant

The slant is an essential route to this type of offense—it relies on a hard cut to the middle of the field. The defensive end actually drops back into coverage but is so poor in his coverage ratings he can't get out of his backpedal. This is the mismatch to be looking for.

Sneak it in before the safety can get there

Our WR must feel like the QB is protecting him with his throws and not leading him into danger. The backer has help over the middle of the field, but the pass is thrown perfectly and the safety can't get there in time to break it up.

OFFENSIVE STYLES

Zone Beater: Ace Big Flip—TE Inside

The Big Flip brings an extra TE into the game. By using their size, you can easily control the middle of the field.

Get two big possession targets inside

A unique hook route

One of our favorite routes in this game is the hook route. The receiver does an extremely good job of exaggerating its cut outside and can really shake the defense.

Plenty of space to operate

When the WR starts his cut, look to get it there fast. The defense is currently occupied by the other receivers in the area, and the quicker we can get the pass, the more yards we can pick up.

Base Play: Shotgun Double Flex—Four Verticals

Here is a common play that we like to come out in and make adjustments to based on the defense. We can keep the routes standard or mix in some shorter throws if the defense backs off.

This is a standard Air Raid formation

Stretch the defense

At the snap, we catch the defense in zone coverage. Once the slot receiver gets behind the LB, look to thread the ball in. If the safeties cheat over the top, you have to bomb it deep on the sideline to test the cornerbacks.

Fit the ball in the seam

If you make the correct read and throw an accurate pass, there isn't a defense in the nation that can consistently stop this offense. Although this is a more advanced read and throw for a QB, it really makes the Air Raid successful.

DEFENSIVE STYLES GAME PLANNING

Defense wins championships! In this chapter we break down the five defensive styles in NCAA Football 12. By sticking to the “five sets for success,” as described in the “Advanced Gameplay Strategies” chapter, you will be able to dominate your opponent throughout the game. No matter the situation you will have a specific set to shut down your opponent. Defending the run is one of the most daunting tasks in all of football. We give you the best run defense available to force your opponent to think pass first. Having the ability to call all base defensive coverages is also an important aspect, and making adjustments on the fly to these base defenses allows us greater flexibility for all situations. Confusing your opponent with pressure is a major defensive focus. We give you the fastest blitzes in the game that have both a man-to-man and zone coverage to help force your opponent into bad decisions. However, if you can’t stop your opponent from getting into the end zone then all the blitzes in the world won’t help you win more games. That’s exactly why we show you our favorite red zone defenses to stop offenses cold in their tracks! Late-game situations call for big-time plays by big-time players. We show you our favorite X-Factor defenses, which will help you get those crucial stops in late-game situations! Setting these five audibles is the foundation that over time will evolve into your very own defensive master plan!

3-4 DEFENSE

The 3-4 defense has three defensive linemen, four linebackers, and four defensive backs. Two mainstream 3-4 defensive styles have been used by both NFL and college teams. One is where the outside linebackers look to rush the quarterback and bring pressure. The other relies on the outside linebackers’ ability to drop into coverage to play the pass; they will occasionally rush the quarterback, but their main priority is pass defense. The 3-4 formation does a great job defending the outside run but can struggle at stopping the inside run. A key strength of the 3-4 is its unique blitz packages from the extra linebackers on the field. Install these five audibles into your 3-4 defensive scheme!

Run Defense: Goal Line—GL Zone

We like making two adjustments when we use this as a run defense outside the red zone: hot route both DEs into deep zones. This creates a Cover 2 zone defense. It ensures that our defense won’t get crushed deep. When in the red zone we leave the DEs as is and look to punish the ball carrier!

A great all-out run defense

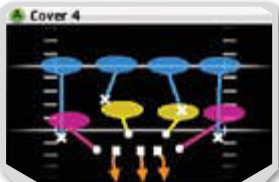

The QB gives the ball off to the HB

All the offensive linemen are engaged with defenders. Our MLB is patiently waiting for the HB to choose which running lane to go through. Run defense is all about outnumbering the offense with defenders in the box. With this play we can take down the ball carrier before he can gain positive yards.

Base Defense: 3-4 Over—Cover 4

Having the 3-4 Over—Cover 4 in our audibles allows us to quickly audible to all basic defensive coverages in the game. Early in games a good strategy is to feel out your opponent. Sit back and see how they want to attack you offensively. On defense you will want to adjust to the situation. If it is third and long use the Cover 4; if it is third and short quick audible to the Cover 2.

3-4 Over—Cover 4

All our plays from the 3-4 Over will look the same pre-snap

Move your left-of-screen MLB to the right-of-screen A gap as shown. Although you aren’t blitzing with this play you are helping to set up your defense for later in the game.

The QB drops back expecting pressure

The quarterback was expecting to see some pressure on third and long. However, we decided to play it safe and cover the field with defenders.

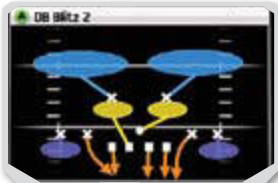

Nowhere to go with the ball!

The QB has to make a decision, and his only option is to tuck it and run or look to throw into tight coverage. Our goal when using the 3-4 Over—Cover 4 is to not be fancy—just execute. If you are stumped for what to call in a specific situation call upon the Cover 4. Then make sure to adjust to the situation with a quick audible.

Man/Zone Blitz: Dime—DB Blitz 2

The DB Blitz 2 is great because of its ability to bring pressure off the edge. It also requires very few pre-snap adjustments. The quick audible down has the same pressure but is man-to-man coverage.

Pressure will come off both edges

Our defense is set up and dialed in

The weak spots on this defense are in the short seams and in the deep corners. Mixing in man-to-man will help to remedy some of the issues you might have if you just called the zone version.

Pressure is coming!

The pressure is flying in off the edge and the QB missed his quick pass opportunity. Once the first options are gone the pressure of this play is so quick that the QB won’t have time to look downfield!

DEFENSIVE STYLES

The HB is taken down in the flat for a short gain

The pressure was coming and the QB had to get rid of the ball before taking the sack. He hit the flat but our defender was in perfect position to take him down. Be sure to watch out for an offense that attacks you vertically. If they do, quick audible to the man-to-man version.

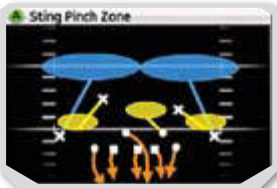

Sack!

The QB expected the deep sideline to be open, but unfortunately for him we switched our defensive coverage and had the deep pass locked up!

TIP We can't stress enough the importance of the man/zone blitz packages. If you expect to catch your opponent off guard this style of blitzing needs to become familiar to you!

Red Zone: 3-4 Over—Sting Pinch Zone

In the red zone, the 3-4 Over—Sting Pinch Zone dials up instant pressure but also does an amazing job of defending the short part of the field. We also like it because of its flexibility in quick audibling to the man-to-man version of the play. This means we can create the same pressure but change up the coverage behind it. In the red zone, confusion is the key to stops.

3-4 Over—Sting Pinch Zone

Same pressure, different coverage

We are hoping to confuse the offense this time around. The offense keyed in on our Cover 2 zone and is looking to beat us deep.

Our defense is set

Notice that there is no tell for the offense with the pre-snap read. At this point we are in a guessing game, and we expect to be on the winning side!

We set up the play with the same positioning as the 3-4 Over—Cover 4

We want the play to look similar to the Cover 4 because we hope to confuse the opponent. Now the offense should be thinking of all the different types of coverages that we might be in. If the offense is thinking about anything other than scoring we have the advantage on that play.

Our play looks exactly the same; is it Cover 4 or Sting Pinch Zone?

The pressure is coming quick!

The quarterback sees the HB open in the flat but the pressure is coming in too quick. He won't be able to get the ball off. At this point all he can do is cut his losses and take the sack. He will live to fight another day, and when he does we will be sure to switch up our red zone defense to our man version!

The pressure is the same

We are now in man-to-man but look to bring the same intense pressure. We love switching up our play calls on back-to-back plays. Most opponents will have noticed holes in the defense on previous plays and expect them to be there the next time. However, we are smarter than that and change our coverage.

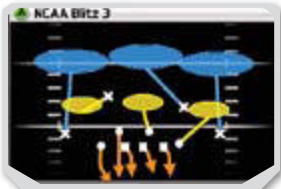

Another sack!

The quarterback expected the flat to be open after the snap. However, our man-to-man defense covered his first option. The pressure was too quick and he wasn't looking to his other options.

X-Factor: 3-4—NCAA Blitz 3

This our play when we look to dial up the pressure in late-game situations. The setup is to place the DT on a QB Contain and the right-of-screen DE on a QB Spy. You then take the blitzing linebacker and stack him off the left edge. We are creating an overload that will be difficult for the offense to pick up.

DEFENSIVE STYLES

The play is set up and ready to go

The pressure will come quickly off the left edge. Our flats our weak but we will concede that because we are trying to prevent a big play late in the game. We protect the middle of the field extremely well here.

Pressure is coming

We isolated the left edge of the offensive line and have one of our defenders shooting free untouched towards the quarterback.

The quarterback doesn't have time in the pocket

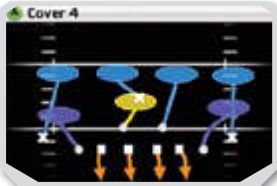

All his options are shut off and we get the needed stop. Save this play for late-game situations. This play is all about surprise, and when you use this in the fourth quarter expect to make big plays!

4-3 DEFENSE

The 4-3 defense is widely considered the best overall base defensive set. Four defensive linemen, three linebackers, and four defensive backs make up the formation. It is strong against the inside run and it is strong against the outside run. The four-man rush can often be overwhelming for the offense and can generate its own pass rush without blitzing. The linebackers won't look to generate much pressure, but they will be responsible for stopping the run. They will also need to drop back into coverage from time to time. The SS will often be called upon to help in run support.

Run Defense: 4-4—Cover 4

We use the Cover 4 to get to the Cover 3, which is what we use for our run defense. Making a few adjustments to the Cover 3 will help to make it a better overall defense when facing the run: shade the safeties in, hot route the left-of-screen DT on a QB Spy, and hot route the right-of-screen DE on QB Contain. Play up in the box with the FS.

While our audible is the Cover 4 we quick audible to the Cover 3 for our run defense

Our run defense is set up

Our defense is set up to stop the run regardless of if it's inside or outside. If the offense fakes the run be sure to not overcommit; drop back into coverage and protect the deep middle of the field.

Nowhere to go!

We are in perfect position to take down the HB for no gain. If you can prove that you can stop the run you will make your opponent one-dimensional. Once this happens you have won not only the battle but the war.

Base Defense: Nickel Normal—9 Velcro

Our base play, the 9 Velcro, is one of our personal favorites in the game. The original play with no adjustments calls for nine defenders in zone coverage with only two pass rushers.

Nickel Normal—9 Velcro

We stack our defenders in the A gap to fake pressure

We move our MLBs into the A gap to set up our man/zone blitz later in this section.

The field is covered

After the snap of the ball the field is completely covered by our max coverage defense. The quarterback will have to force a pass into coverage.

Almost a pick 6!

The quarterback broke the number one rule about throwing to the flat: never throw late! Our cornerback dropped the ball but almost made the big play!

Man/Zone Blitz: Nickel Normal—Mid Zone Blitz

This play will complement our base play extremely well. They are from the same formation so we set them up to have the same look pre-snap. Our quick audible down is also our man-to-man version of the blitz. The setup of this play is to globally blitz all linebackers and then move them between both DTs. Your last step is to hot route the left-of-screen DT to a QB Contain.

The pressure will come off the right edge

Another unique thing about this play is that we are showing A gap pressure but bringing pressure off the right edge. That creates an interesting dilemma for your opponents. They will feel the need to slide protect to protect the A gap, which will let the pressure off the edge come in even easier.

The pressure forces the QB to roll left

We force the QB to roll left, away from his throwing arm. This allows our defense the extra time to get to the QB. The field is covered and the QB throws up a prayer downfield.

Our man version has the same pressure

The quick audible down is our man-to-man version. The setup is virtually the same as we globally blitz all linebackers and then move them between the DTs. Next hot route the left-of-screen DT to a QB Contain and finally hot route the left-of-screen DE on a deep zone.

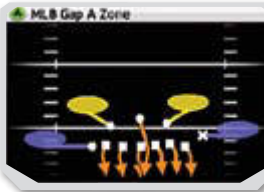

The pressure came flying off the edge!

The quarterback isn't ready for the pressure and is sacked on the play.

Red Zone: Goal Line—MLB Gap A Zone

Stopping the offense in the red zone is crucial to getting wins. The MLB Gap A Zone will bring quick pressure but also protect the key areas of the field in the red zone.

Lockdown defense in the red zone starts here!

In position to make a play

We make no adjustments to this play pre-snap. If the offense looks to pass to the flat we will have it covered. If they look to the TEs in the end zone they will be covered.

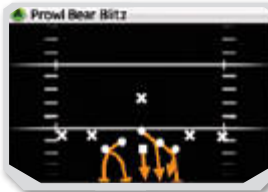

The offense drops back for the pass but our defense isn't fooled!

The pressure is quick enough that the offense can't get the quick pass off. We shut down the offense's first option in the flat and it resulted in a sack.

X-Factor: 1-5-5—Prowl Bear Blitz

The 1-5-5 has only one defensive lineman, five linebackers, and five defensive backs. The alignment of this formation is can confuse many opponents because they are not accustomed to seeing it. We save this blitz for late-game situations.

The 1-5-5 shows the offense a unique look

Sending six defenders after the QB

This is an all-over blitz. We are in a Cover 0 so we need to make sure the pressure gets in quick or else we might get beaten deep.

The QB feels the pressure off the left edge

The QB can either look to scramble or attempt to make a throw into coverage. Either way we are the beneficiaries of his decision.

The pass is broken up

The QB decided to look deep, but our defender was able to break up the pass. The pressure forced a bad decision and resulted in the incomplete pass!

DEFENSIVE STYLES

3-3-5 DEFENSE

The 3-3-5 is an extremely popular defense in NCAA Football 12. It has the player personnel to defend any offensive set and has the ability to send exotic blitzes after the quarterback. The formation calls for three defensive linemen, three linebackers, and five defensive backs. At first glance it will appear to be a 3-4 formation; however, the defense has added an extra defensive back for a linebacker. This allows extra speed on the field for teams that like to spread the ball out but still maintain a heavy focus on the run. The 3-3-5 is one of our go-to playbooks when playing against an opponent who plays a pass-first offense.

Run Defense: 3-3-5 Split—Cover 2

The Cover 2 allows us to maximize the number of defenders in the box. We make very few adjustments when facing the run. Be sure not to be fooled by play action, and look to recover deep if the offense is passing.

3-3-5 Split—Cover 2

Our run defense is set up

We move the MLB over the center so that we are in better position to take down the ball carrier. At the snap of the ball hang back in the box and wait for the HB to make his cut into the running lane. As soon as he does look to fill the hole and take him down.

Every offensive blocker is engaged with a defender

Our free MLB is in position for the HB to cut up the middle, and our outside linebacker is free waiting for the HB to move outside. Our user-controlled FS has drifted back in case the HB cuts towards the left of the formation. We are in perfect position to make the stop.

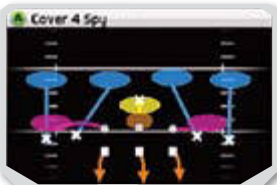

Our MLB takes the HB down!

The HB cut up towards the middle of the field, right where our MLB was. The HB had no open running lanes and we stopped him in the backfield for a loss.

Base Defense: 3-3-5 Stack—Cover 4 Spy

The Cover 4 Spy is our base defense, the one we go to when we are trying to get a feel for what the offense is doing. We like to sit back and play conservatively to get an understanding of what the offense is trying to do. We make a few minor adjustments to get more bang for your buck from this play.

Cover 4 Spy

Our adjustments turn the play into a Cover 5

The adjustments we make are to hot route both DEs into hook zones and to drop the MLB into a deep zone. We then shade the safeties out, which will create a Cover 5. We have blanketed the field with defenders with this max coverage setup.

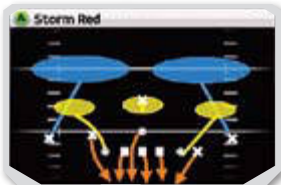

The QB is taken down!

We get the coverage sack because the QB couldn't find an open receiver. Our one pass rusher forced his way through the offensive line and put pressure on the QB!

Man/Zone Blitz: 3-3-5 Bear—Storm Red

With the Storm Red it looks as if pressure will come off the edge, but the heat actually comes right up the middle. This is our zone blitz, and our quick audible is the man-to-man version.

3-3-5 Bear—Storm Red

Here comes the MLB!

The pressure comes right up the middle. Notice how the offensive line is completely spread out as the interior of the line picks up the down linemen and the tackles spread out to pick up the outside pressure. This leaves an open lane for our MLB.

The HB is taken down in the flat

The QB got the ball out as the pressure came in quickly. He shot the ball out to the flat, but our defense swarmed the receiver and stopped him for a short gain.

Here's the man-to-man version

This time we look to dial up the pressure but have man-to-man coverage. This should fool the offense and force a bad decision by the QB.

DEFENSIVE STYLES

Pressure is coming up the middle again!

The MLB is screaming after the QB once again. This time the QB looks to attack the weakness of the Cover 2 zone—only we aren't playing zone, we are in man-to-man!

The pass is overthrown

The QB expected the deep middle to be open and looked to expose our defense with his TE. However, we had the TE covered and the QB tried to fit the ball into tight coverage. The TE couldn't go up and get the ball, and the pass fell incomplete.

Red Zone: Goal Line—GL Zone

The GL Zone gives us great balance with a nice pass rush. We are sending six defenders after the QB but still have five defenders balanced out in coverage.

GL Zone

The HB receives the ball but has nowhere to go

The balance on the field creates major issues for offenses inside the red zone. We have all running lanes covered and the HB has nowhere to go.

Taken down for no gain!

The HB can't wiggle through to the end zone and our defense makes the stop. If the offense looks to pass we will also be in good position to make the stop as our defensive line will generate excellent pressure.

The QB is in trouble!

This time the quarterback looked to get the ball out to his receiver towards the sideline. However, our pressure is too quick and the receiver isn't open. The GL Zone is hands down the best red zone defense in the game!

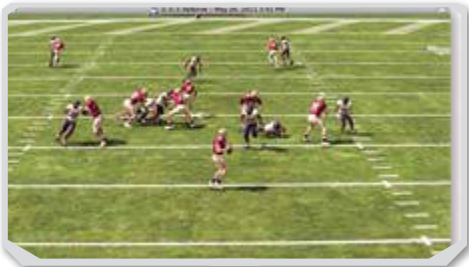

X-Factor: 1-5-5—Prowl Bear Blitz

The 1-5-5 has the flexibility to rush all five linebackers and also the ability to drop them all back by using global hot routes.

This means we can drastically change what we are doing instantly. This type of change gives us the confidence to confuse our opponent in late-game situations. Will we rush the QB or will we drop back into coverage?

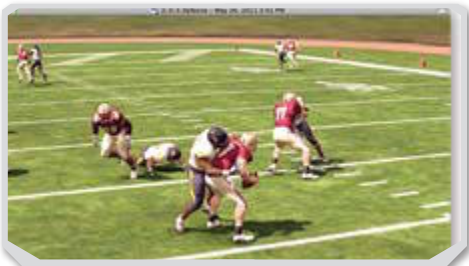

1-5-5—Prowl Bear Blitz

Here comes the pressure!

We decide to send the house after the QB. The linebacker is closing in and the QB needs to get rid of the ball quickly.

Sack!

Unfortunately, the QB held onto the ball a bit too long, and he is taken down for the sack. Consider dropping all your linebackers into coverage to confuse your opponent in those crucial late game situations!

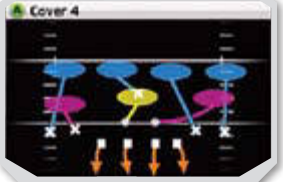

4-2-5 DEFENSE

The 4-2-5 is a defense built for those who want the speed on the field to stop aerial attacks and enough defensive linemen for those who want to stop the run. The formation calls for four defensive linemen, two linebackers, and five defensive backs. The alignment of the 4-2-5 allows for pressure to come from any angle. We will have eight defenders in the box to help stop the run but still have the speed in the defensive secondary to match up with any offensive formation. An adjustment we like to make is to substitute our faster linebackers in at DE. This gives us a bit more flexibility within the formation.

Run Defense: 4-2-5 Normal—Cover 4

We set the Cover 4 as our audible to give us the flexibility in using the Cover 4 in specific situations.

However, when it is a running situation we

We use the 4-2-5 Normal—Cover 4 to quick audible to the Cover 3 for our run defense

All running lanes are filled with defenders

The only adjustment we make is to move the FS over the center. This helps ensure that all offensive blockers are engaged with defenders. Our MLB is shooting free and looks to take down the HB in the backfield.

Hit stick!

Our MLB smashed the HB in the backfield. Luckily for the offense the HB held onto the ball. Our MLB delivered a crushing blow for a 3-yard loss on the play!

Base Defense: 4-2-5 Under Slide—Cover 6

The Cover 6 is a great defense to use when the offense is on either hash mark. If the offense is on the left hash look to have the Cover 4 side play the short sideline and the Cover 2 side play the long sideline. If the offense is on the right hash flip the play.

4-2-5 Under Slide—Cover 6

There's double coverage down the sideline

The offense read Cover 2 zone down the left sideline and thought they had the matchup they wanted down the right sideline. The deception of the Cover 6 works perfectly as the QB throws into double coverage down the sideline.

Man/Zone Blitz: 4-2-5 Normal—SS Eagle Zone

The SS Eagle Zone brings excellent pressure off the edge. We like to use it to set up our inside man-to-man blitz. With zone we bring pressure outside and with man we look to bring it off the inside edge!

4-2-5 Normal—SS Eagle Zone

Pressure is coming off the edge

The QB has to make a decision quickly. The pressure is coming off the edge. This play is great for offenses that like to run crossing patterns over the middle of the field.

The ball is batted down at the line of scrimmage

While we didn't get to the QB for the sack we forced the early throw. Our defensive linemen made a great play and got a hand on the ball.

The quick audible blitz is our man-to-man version

We apply the same pressure but fool the defense by changing up the coverage. The QB is a sitting duck!

Red Zone: Goal Line—GL Zone

In the red zone there is no better play in the game than the GL Zone. We look to call this every time we are in the red zone!

GL Zone is our go-to red zone defense

Even against Shotgun we match up well in the red zone

The compact nature of the red zone allows us to play with no help over the top. We love facing Shotgun sets when using the GL Zone.

No one is open

Pressure is flying in and the QB has no receiver to throw to.

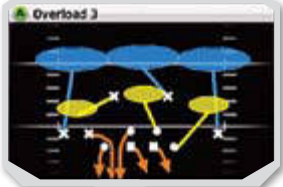

The result of holding onto the ball too long is a sack!

The QB should have taken off or dumped the ball off to his HB in the short flat. Indecision on his part leads to the sack and the loss of 10 yards.

X-Factor: Nickel 2-4-5—Overload 3

For late-game situations we call upon the Nickel 2-4-5—Overload 3. This play is perfect because it overloads the entire left side of the offensive line. The offense would have to drastically change their play to pick up this pressure.

All the pressure is coming from the left

The offense hasn't seen this look all game and doesn't know what to expect. In crucial situations it's important to make your opponent think about making major changes to the game plan.

The offense had a few open receivers but wasn't able to pick up the pressure

The offense made no adjustments to pick up the pressure. They had open receivers but couldn't get the ball out in time. Be sure to save this play for crucial spots in the game!

MULTIPLE DEFENSE

The Multiple defense takes into account all the defenses we have covered in this section. It has elements of all the other defensive styles. Inside you will find 3-4, 4-3, 3-3-5, and 4-2-5 formations that will give you the ultimate defensive look. This defensive style gives you all the great formations from each style but lacks the depth that the individual books possess.

Run Defense: 5-2—Cover 1

The 5-2 is a unique formation in that it's the only formation other than goal line that has five defensive linemen. This creates an interesting matchup problem for defenses. Typically we like using Cover 3 zone as our run defense, but with the 5-2 we like playing man-to-man.

5-2—Cover 1

The FS and MLB are waiting for the HB to make his move

The MLB is responsible for any run to the right, while the FS looks to cover any run to the left. Whichever way the HB goes we will have a clear path to take him down.

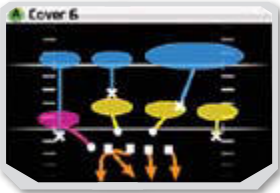

The HB cuts right into our MLB

The HB makes his move right and our MLB meets him with a stone wall. The 5-2 formation is one of the best overall run defenses in the game.

Base Defense: 5-2—Cover 2

We use the Cover 2 as our base defense because of the great zone coverage it has. To make the play better for downfield coverage we hot route both our outside defensive backs into deep zones.

5-2—Cover 2

The deep zone hot routes work perfectly

The offense was looking to attack us vertically downfield. However, our hot routed deep zone is in perfect position to swat down the ball.

Man/Zone Blitz: 3-4 Normal NCAA Blitz & 3-4 Normal NCAA Blitz 3

The pressure of this play relies on a stunt off the right edge. The defensive end breaks inside while the MLB blitzes off the outside edge. We are trying to free up the linebacker with the stunt.

3-4 Normal—NCAA Blitz

The pressure screams off the edge

The stunt works and the pressure comes flying off the right edge. This play applies passive pressure, meaning that the blitz won't always get in untouched but it will still apply solid pressure.

3-4 Normal—NCAA Blitz 3

We also set the NCAA Blitz 3 as an audible because the quick audible from this formation doesn't match up with either of these plays. We look to call upon this play when our opponent keys in on the man-to-man coverage of the NCAA Blitz.

DEFENSIVE STYLES

The pressure is steaming in but there are no open receivers

The QB has an open passing window to the TE streaking down the middle of the field. However, the pressure is coming too quick and he doesn't have time to get the ball off!

Red Zone: Goal Line—GL Zone

Inside the red zone there is no better play than the GL Zone. We call upon this play each time we are in this situation.

GL Zone

We are in great position against the run or pass

The offense is in an Ace Normal formation. There is a threat for run or pass; if they do pass we will have a huge advantage as they won't have the pass protection needed to stop our rush.

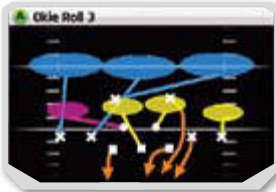

The offense calls the HB Screen

The offense makes a terrible play call with the HB Screen. We get into the backfield and take down the QB before he can dump the ball off to the HB.

X-Factor: Dime 3-2-6—Okie Roll 3

Roll coverages have been all the rage recently. The defense lines up out of position pre-snap, and then just as the offense looks to snap the ball they move back into position. The goal of this is to confuse the QB and make him assume wrong coverages. We use the Okie Roll 3 as our X-Factor defense late in games to confuse our opponent!

Dime 3-2-6—Okie Roll 3

The receiver is open down the sideline

The QB misses the receiver streaking down the sideline because he was confused by the pre-snap read. On defense we are gambling that the QB won't make the correct read and that our pressure will get to him in time before he can make a correction.

The QB throws the ball down the wrong sideline for the incomplete pass

The QB read Cover 2 pre-snap down the left sideline and missed out on the receiver down the right sideline. Oftentimes with roll coverages you will find yourself making big plays defensively against the pass!

#1 Oklahoma Sooners

TEAM INTRODUCTION

Despite losing their top-rated RB from a season ago, the Oklahoma Sooners still enter the season as the top-rated team. The Sooners have one of the top players in all of college football with QB #12. Look to get the ball to playmaker WR #85. He is a game-breaking player who can stress the defense all game long. The defense is extremely solid and will be impossible to sustain long drives against. The Sooners will not accept anything less than a national title returning to Norman this season.

Look to see which receiver the defenders neglect to cover and deliver a strike.

Quick Pass

Shotgun Split Slot—689 Hook

The 689 Hook is a unique quick pass from Shotgun. Our RB takes a sharp angle and the QB can bullet the pass inside.

Man Beater

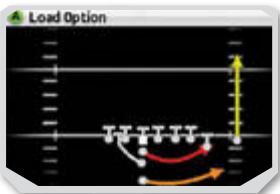

Shotgun Tight Flex—Double Cross

This crossing play is one of the best in the game. It allows for consistent separation against man defense.

Base Play

OFFENSIVE STYLE: One Back

TEAM INTRODUCTION

Alabama has been one of the most consistent teams in college football over the last few seasons. It seems they are always in the National Championship conversation. This season they lose three tremendous players; however, it appears they will quickly reload and stay strong with nine defensive starters returning. RB #3 will finally get his chance to carry the One Back offense in Tuscaloosa. The defense is extremely strong in the back seven, so any team who gets down early will have trouble fighting back. Look to play your cornerbacks aggressively since you have tremendous recovery speed in your secondary and over the middle of the field. Alabama has two very similarly rated QBs; however, both have different skill sets. In the past, Alabama has gone with a pocket passer, but if you're looking to change up styles, try the backup QB (#14), who can really put fear into the defense with his legs. There is no doubt the Crimson Tide will be around and in the hunt come January.

Goal Line—Iso

Goal Line—Power O

Quick Pass

Shotgun 5WR Flex Trey—WR Mid Screen

The WR Mid Screen is a unique screen that is used to attack the middle of the field. This is great for attacking aggressive defenses.

Man Beater

Shotgun Tight—Z Spot

To the right we have a great route combination to beat zone defense, and to the left we like streaking the inside receiver to crush man-to-man.

Zone Beater

Singleback Bunch Base—TE Angle

When the defense is playing zone coverage look for the TE running the angle route. First look to him as he breaks to the flat then as a second read look for him as he breaks over the middle of the field.

Base Play

Shotgun Wild Tide—Sweep QB Screen

This formation is unique and we look to get the ball out wide to our receiver with pulling linemen in front of him. Hang on to this play for those late-game situations!

#3 Stanford Cardinal

TEAM INTRODUCTION

The Stanford Cardinal team heads into the season with one of their highest preseason rankings ever. With QB #12 leading the charge, Stanford will be a true threat in NCAA Football 12! The Cardinal had a change in leadership from last season; however, they will stick with their high-powered Pro Style offense. Look to work the football to HB #33, who is extremely balanced and can shoulder a heavy workload. The defense has a very strong LB core and will look to dominate the middle of the field. The league is packed with talent, and Stanford finally has the speed and depth to match up. If you love to use a traditional offense and spread the football around, try Stanford.

Three Headed Rushing Attack

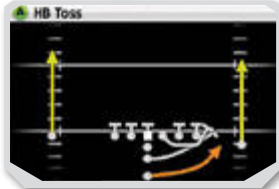

I-Form Normal—Counter

I-Form Normal—Iso

I-Form Normal—Toss

Running out of the I-Form Normal allows you to force the defense to stay balanced and keep your offense controlling the clock. This should get the defense running downhill and set up for play action fakes.

Zone Beater

Shotgun Bunch HB Str—Seattle

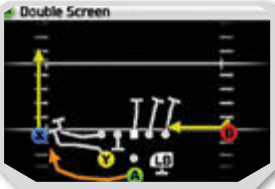

When reading zone coverage, the three wide receivers split out can really terrorize a defense. By motioning our far WR out right, we can get our player in a vulnerable area in coverage.

Quick Pass

Pistol Full House—Double Screen

The Full House will have our opponent thinking run, but this play allows us to hit a high percentage of our passes. Use the screen to either side and look to get upfield. This play will beat the blitz consistently.

Man Beater

Ace Slot Flex—Inside Cross

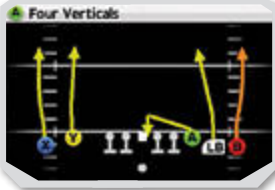

If the defense attempts to play man to man, use the crossing routes over the middle to get space. Our QB has the accuracy to consistently deliver a perfect lead pass to keep our receiver running for more yards.

Base Play

Empty Trey Flex—Four Verticals

When you have a dynamic QB like Stanford, you must work deep throws into your offense. The Four Verticals play will isolate defenders in coverage and allow QB #12 to use his dynamic throw power and throw accuracy ratings to move the chains.

OFFENSIVE STYLE: Multiple

TEAM INTRODUCTION

The LSU Tigers come into the season following a great victory in the Cotton Bowl. Start QB #9; he has the same overall rating as QB #11, but he gives you a big speed advantage. LSU has plenty of weapons on the outside to spread the field. Focus on WR #2, who leads this solid core. On the defensive side of the ball, CB #17 can shut down nearly any WR when manned up against them. Look to work in plenty of zone coverage as it will bring out the true strength of your defense. By staying in Nickel coverages, we can keep our speedy LBs on the field and use their smarts to be one step ahead of the offense. LSU is tremendously solid and can play nearly any style on offense; look for the Tigers to be a tough matchup in NCAA Football 12.

Shotgun Spread Flex—HB Draw

Shotgun Spread Flex—HB Dive

Shotgun Spread Flex—Speed Option

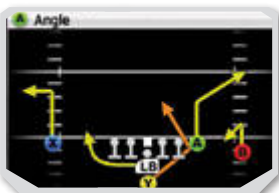

LSU has one of the most distinctive rushing attacks in the game. By keeping the offense spread out, we can utilize our team speed to keep the defense honest.

Quick Pass

I-Form—HB Angle

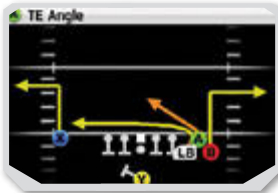

By getting the ball quickly to our HB, we take the pressure off our offensive line. Allow the RBs 96 acceleration rating to burn the defender and hit him after his cut.

Man Beater

Ace Bunch Base—Drive

The Drive concept allows the Tigers to get the exact matchup they desire. By audibling to this play, we can get an unstoppable amount of talent in the skill positions, so that no defense can handle it.

Zone Beater

Ace Bunch Base—TE Angle

The TE Angle simply puts too much pressure on the middle of a defense. The QB has the option of delivering the football quickly or waiting until the route gets behind the zone for big yards.

Base Play

Pistol Y-Trips—Under Go

The depth of the Under Go play adds multiple dimensions to our offense. If the defense pays too much attention short, look to bullet a pass in the seam. If all else fails, dump it off to the delayed route releasing out of the backfield.

TEAM INTRODUCTION

With a blistering rate of play, the Oregon Ducks will be a popular team in NCAA Football 12. The Ducks have a tremendous weapon in QB #1. He has the ability to break the game open with his legs. Also returning for the national title runner-up is HB #21; this player is the top overall RB in college football. When you combine these two players' skill sets, you have the makings of an unstoppable offense. On the defensive side, Oregon has plenty of speed, which will help them stay on top. The defense has one of the best safeties with FS #20. The Ducks did lose some starters, but they have plenty of depth to be a top team this season.

The running threat that HB #21 represents will strike fear in opposing defenses. We have a solid three-headed rushing attack that won't be stopped!

Zone Beater

Shotgun Trio HB Wk—PA Duck Seams

The wheel route by our TE is very unique and will stretch zone defenses both horizontally and vertically. The angled post route is a great option against Cover 2 zone.

Quick Pass

Shotgun Wild Duck Spread—Mtn Option Pass

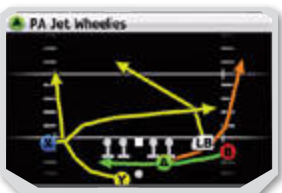

The Mtn Option Pass has the threat of the option run as well as the pass. Make sure to have a good read on your opponent. Against heavy pressure try to get to the edge with the option.

Man Beater

The crossing patterns on this play will help to consistently beat man-to-man defense. Look to use this play when your opponent is in man-to-man.

TEAM INTRODUCTION

The Buckeyes have some big changes coming in Columbus. However, one thing will remain the same: a Top 10 preseason ranking. With star QB #2 at the helm, Ohio State will once again be a highly used team online. Look to spread the ball to WR #8, who can impact the game with his ability to run after the catch. The Multiple Style scheme that Ohio State runs is perfect to capture the talent of its personnel. The defense's overall team strength is remarkable; look to isolate RE #43 in one-on-one matchups. This player is so dynamic that he will be able to beat tackles with speed and bull rush guards with his strength. If Ohio State can survive early, there is no doubt they could be seeing another berth in the Bowl Championship Series.

#7 Oklahoma State Cowboys

TEAM INTRODUCTION

Oklahoma State will try to carry its momentum forward from a tremendous campaign last season. They have one of the ultimate playmakers in all of college football with WR #81. This receiver should be targeted consistently until the defense proves they have the ability to slow him down. This will take plenty of attention, so look to get QB #3 into a rhythm with your other three WRs, who are very balanced. On defense, the Cowboys have plenty of depth in the defensive secondary, so don't be worried about getting into a shootout. Do everything possible to use your safeties to shut down the run. Your linebackers are the weakness, so look to play as much Nickel and Dime coverage as possible.

Pistol Twin TE—Dive

Pistol Twin TE—Strong Power

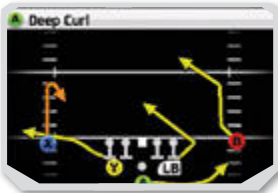

By running out of the Pistol formation, we can quickly get the ball into our RBs hands and get him heading in any direction. Since we lack a lead blocker, we will use a pulling guard and follow him through the holes.

Quick Pass

Pistol Cross—Deep Curl

By sticking with the Pistol, we give ourselves three quick options out of the backfield. We can also keep any back in the backfield to block and give us a max protect look. We take the snap a few yards back and should have a great quick read to beat the blitz.

Man Beater

Shotgun Big Flip—TE Angle

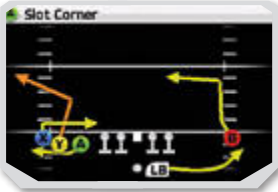

The TE Angle route makes it impossible for the defense to play man. Since the receiving options are so tightly lined up at the snap, there is not enough room for two defenders to hang with our WRs. Hit them quickly or wait until they completely toast their defender.

Zone Beater

Shotgun Trips Open—Slot Corner

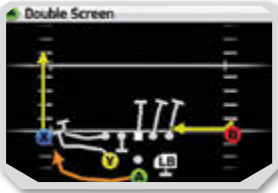

The Slot Corner is the perfect play if we catch the defense in zone coverage. We have a deep route that can attack Cover 3, while the underneath route is perfect if they play a Cover 4 and neglect the flats.

Base Play

Pistol Cross—Double Screen

The Double Screen is a dynamic play that must be manually defended; however, since we can quickly throw both ways the play is impossible to stop. Look to get the ball out quickly to whichever side the defender runs away from.

TEAM INTRODUCTION

The Boise State Broncos have been a highly used team and are very recognizable with their patented blue turf home field. After an incredible season, the Broncos return 14 starters and will likely make another run at an undefeated season. If you like an aerial attack, consider using QB #11; he has tremendous accuracy and can carve the defense up and down the field. Boise State finally has a true threat out of the backfield in HB #22. Look to use him to create a balanced attack that will keep the defense uncomfortable. On defense, Boise does a great job of running the 4-2-5. They don't have excellent depth at CB, but their safeties more than help cover up. If you can use RE #92 to get pressure, the opponent won't have the time to head downfield.

Strong I Tight—HB Dive

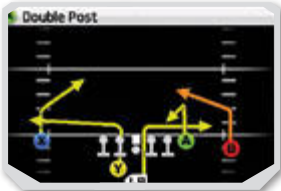

Strong I Tight—Off Tackle

Quick Pass

Weak I Normal—Double Post

The Double Post's utilization of routes out of the backfield makes it hard to contain. We can hit the RBs at any time and it forces the defense to line up its coverage early, which helps us get a read against the blitz.

Man Beater

Ace Big TE Cross

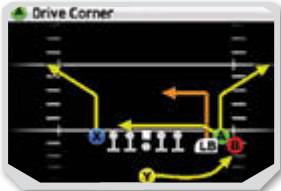

The depth of the crossing routes creates a natural pick that frees up the receiver. Deliver a strike that leads the target so he can continue to chew up the defense.

Zone Beater

Ace Bunch Drive Corner

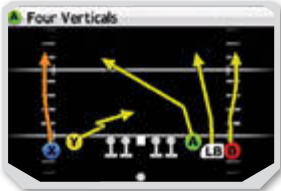

By running a Bunch set, we are able to send WRs out at different depths to overrun the defense. On this play, we can either look to the corner route or wait and see what depth the LB plays at and force him high or low.

Base Play

Shotgun 5WR Flex Trey

Any time you have the game-changing ability of a QB like #11, you want to spread the defense out and look to beat the defense deep. With all the athletes Boise State has, you should be able to take down any type of coverage with this formation.

TEAM INTRODUCTION

Texas A&M has one of the best dual threat QBs in the nation. QB #17 is a tremendous player, and his ability to scramble and keep plays alive makes him a factor on every drive. On the edge, WR #8 is one of the top route runners in all of college football. Unless the defense has an elite CB, they most focus a tremendous amount of resources to stop him. On defense for the Aggies, the team is led by MLB #8. He is a sure tackler who has earned his captaincy by producing. Texas A&M also has good depth at the CB position, including one of the fastest defenders in the conference.

OFFENSIVE STYLE: Multiple

TEAM INTRODUCTION

The Florida State Seminoles graduated a talented QB last season; however, they look to be okay under the leadership of QB #3. FSU won't have to rely on a passing game with a star like HB #23 in the backfield. He has solid speed and is a threat on any play. Make sure to test the defense by using all four of the Seminoles' strong wide receivers. This core has great depth, and any player is a threat to go over 100 yards. RE #49 is an absolute beast off the edge; his combination of acceleration and power moves will dominate any non All-American lineman. Backing him up is a talented group of LBs who can not only play coverage but scream off the edge when a blitz is called.

Impact Players

Three Headed Rushing Attack

I-Form Tight—Counter

I-Form Tight—Iso

I-Form Tight—Power O

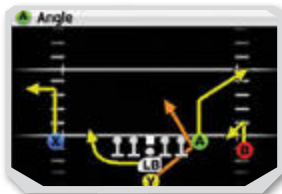

The I-Form Tight is the go-to running formation for the Seminoles. It allows you to stay balanced and get the ball into your very talented RB's hands.

Quick Pass

I-Form Normal—HB Angle

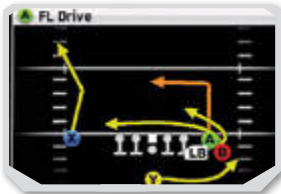

The HB Angle is the perfect play to beat the blitz. Since the formation is compact, we can see the defenders sneak up to the line. Look to drill it into the FB or bullet it wide to the WR if the CB sags off.

Man Beater

Ace Bunch Base—FL Drive

The Flanker Drive is a classic play to beat man defense. The WR who runs a drag will get great help from the other WRs who clear out the area. Look to have a speedy WR on this route and deliver it once he gets separation.

Zone Beater

Pistol 4WR Trio—Four Verticals

If the defense tries to sit back in Cover 3 to help balance out its speed deficit, we will want to run a Four Verticals scheme. This play will force the defense to cover deep and unlock the seams for big gains.

Base Play

Shotgun Split Slot—Deep Curls

By running this formation, we can balance out the defense and quickly make adjustments to help in pass protection. Wait until one of the curl routes comes open underneath, step up in the pocket, and bullet the pass in. Lead the pass away from the defender and shield the ball.

TEAM INTRODUCTION

The Badgers made an epic run to the Rose Bowl last season, and this year it looks as if they are poised to return. The Badgers start the season with not one, but two tremendous options at RB. Wisconsin usually is a traditional pocket passing team, but this season Badger fans have two QBs who can make plays with their feet. By mixing in a good number of roll-outs with the power run game, Wisconsin will be very tough to stop. WR #1 should alleviate any pressure if you get down early in the game. On defense, leadership is brought to the forefront by CB #26. Look for this player to come up big with game-clinching interceptions. The defense is very strong and should be able to hold up against any type of offense that is thrown at it.

Three Headed Rushing Attack

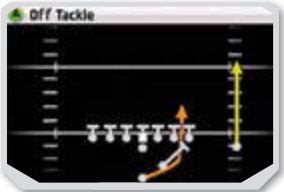

Strong I Tight—Counter

Strong I Tight—Dive

Strong I Tight—Off Tackle

Some teams rely on misdirection and trickery to pick up yards on the ground, but not Wisconsin. The Strong I Tight allows you to utilize the strength of the line and push the defense back. Make them prove they can stop you!

Quick Pass

Strong I Tight—FB Angle

By adding a quick pass out of the identical run formation, you can quickly beat an overly aggressive defense. If any defender loses his assignment for even a second, you will be running downfield for big yards.

Man Beater

Strong I Tight—PA TE Cross

By adding a play action pass out of the Strong I Tight, we know have the ability to keep the defense off balance. Look to call this after setting up the run; if anyone bites then go deep! Otherwise, drop it off over the middle to a big TE.

Zone Beater

Ace Big Twins—Weak Flood

Once the defense realizes they can't match up, they will always try a zone defense.

Here we will call a flood and let the WR decide with his option route. If you roll out, this throw will become easier for your QB.

Base Play

Ace Trey Open—SE Cross

Once you're done beating your opponent physically, look to open the attack with the SE Cross. If you can isolate a WR on a linebacker your team can easily move the ball downfield via the air.

OFFENSIVE STYLE: Spread

TEAM INTRODUCTION

The Tigers are coming off a National Championship season but lost their star QB in the process. Major questions arise in the passing game, but TE #43 looks to help calm the storm with his poise and experience. Look to get him the ball in the seam and use him to stretch the defense vertically. Sophomore HB #5 is an absolute burner and is one of the best playmakers in the entire country. Defensively, LOLB #21 looks to use great speed to put pressure on offenses throughout the entire season.

Three Headed Rushing Attack

Goal Line H Tight—HB Blast

Goal Line H Tight—FB Dive

Goal Line H Tight—HB Power O

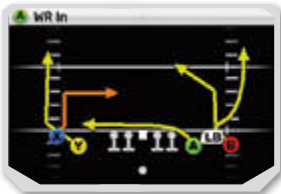

The Tigers' run game relies heavily on HB #5. His explosive speed allows him to take any run and turn it into a touchdown.

Quick Pass

Shotgun 5WR Trio—WR In

Spreading the defense out when they look to send pressure is a great way to attack the defense. Look to the wheel routes on the outside against the zone blitz and look to the drag routes against man-to-man.

Man Beater

Singleback Bunch Base—Z Spot

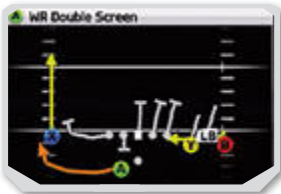

Your first option is to the receiver in the flat and then to the spot receiver. Your last read against zone is the corner route. Against man-to-man look for the isolated receiver on the crossing pattern.

Zone Beater

Shotgun 4WR Trio—WR Double Screen

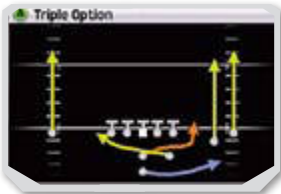

The Double Screen is a different look to attack the defense with. Our first option when facing man is to the screen receiver to the right. If that option is closed look to the screen on the left.

Base Play

Pistol Strong Slot—Triple Option

To mix things up we like using the Pistol Triple Option. This gives us three different running options to attack the defense. HB #5 will help with the effectiveness of this play.

#13 South Carolina Gamecocks

TEAM INTRODUCTION

The Gamecocks were one game away from the SEC title last season, and after finishing 9–5 they look to rebound with a strong 2011 season. Last season the Gamecocks’ sensational HB #21 had a breakout season. His explosive speed is top in the nation, and he should be the focal point of your offense. QB #5 has all the tools to make every throw on the field, and a lot of the team’s success will rest heavily on his shoulders. Defensively, CB #5 will be a lockdown defender and force opposing offenses to look away from him on every down. If you get the ball into the hands of HB #21 expect big things from the Gamecocks this season.

I-Form H Pro—Iso

I-Form H Pro—HB Sweep Strg

There is nothing fancy about this running attack. Read the defense and then take what they give you. This three-headed rushing attack is what smashmouth football is all about!

Quick Pass

Shotgun Ace Twins—Posts

When we’re facing the blitz, this play gives us two quick options to attack with. First look to the flat receiver and then to the HB on the angle route. Make the defense pay for sending pressure.

Man Beater

Shotgun Split Slot—Shakes

We like this play because of the one-on-one matchups it creates against man-to-man defenses. Look to get the ball to your playmaking HB #21 and WR #85.

Zone Beater

Singleback Bunch—Flanker Drive

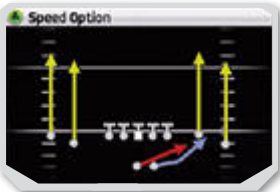

The blue route out of the backfield is what makes this play tick. It will add extra protection against the blitz, but it also puts extreme pressure on zone defenses. Look to the wheel route and drag as your first options and then look for the blue route out of the backfield.

Base Play

Shotgun Normal Y-Flex—Speed Option

The Speed Option is a play we like to use to dictate how we want the ebb and flow of the game to be. If the defense can’t stop our dual threat, look to run the no huddle with this play!

TEAM INTRODUCTION

TCU proved last year that David can take down Goliath by beating Wisconsin in the Rose Bowl. Despite losing one of the nation's top QBs, TCU's offense still has a A grade. HB #34 has dynamic speed and agility to make defenders miss all over the field. The defense this year for TCU looks to build upon its 4-2-5 setup and really take the Cover 6 coverage to the next level. MLB #35 and ROLB #43 will be responsible for the defense's success and look to cause havoc in backfields all around the country.

I-Form Tight—Load Option

Goal Line Power I—Power Option

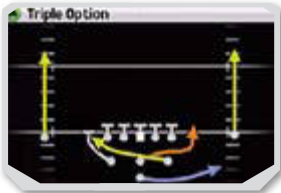

The Goal Line Power I is an all-out commitment to the run. We love the option to get the ball to our HB #34 and have him use his playmaking ability in the open field.

Quick Pass

Pistol Y-Trips—Triple Option

The Triple Option can put extreme pressure on any defense, especially aggressive ones. The Pistol formation gives us a little more time to see where the pressure is coming from, which allows us to dissect the defense and make big plays with this option run!

Man Beater

Shotgun Trips TE—HB Swing

The deep threat of this play will strike fear in any man-to-man defense. Look for the deep post as your option downfield. The HB out of the backfield and the short curl will be your options underneath.

Zone Beater

Pistol Y Trips—Y Trail

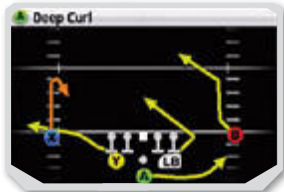

Against Cover 2 zone look to the outside streak receivers. Against Cover 3 and Cover 4 look to the trail route over the middle. Your last option is the blue route out of the backfield. Pound for pound this play is tops in the game!

Base Play

Pistol Full House—Deep Curl

The Pistol Full House—Deep Curl is one of the best base plays in the entire game. We have two flat options as well as an angle route to beat the blitz. On the outside we also have curl routes to create a Curl Flat passing concept. This play can cause fits for defenses!

The big win in 2010 against Notre Dame set the tone for the rest of the season. A lot of the team's success in 2011 will be in the hands of QB #8. He has the ability to make every throw and even has the pocket presence to scramble when needed. HB #4 looks to have a big season with his ability to run over defenders. Look to get him the ball in the flat so he can use his shiftiness to make plays. Defensively, the Spartans expect FS# 39 to not only help in run support but to be a ball hawk in the secondary.

The Spartans, unlike most other teams in NCAA Football 12, will only need to utilize two runs for their power run game. The Power Option is so effective that it can be used to run up the middle as well as to the outside.

Quick Pass

Shotgun Normal—Angle Smash

Look to the HB on the angle route if the defense sends pressure. This route is extremely difficult to stop. Throw the pass as he breaks out wide or wait for him to cut over the middle of the field.

Man Beater

Shotgun 5WR Flex—Spacing

Shotgun 5WR Flex—Spacing does an excellent job at isolating man-to-man defenders against our bigger WRs. Look for your big targets to post up the smaller defenders.

Against zone, Bunch formations crush the defense. Z Spot is our favorite play when facing zone. Look to the flat and then the spot receiver.

TEAM INTRODUCTION

The Cornhuskers look to bring their fairly new Spread offense to the Big Ten. After years in the Big 12, with a heavy dose of the running game they appear ready to make a big splash. Losing a great HB in the off season will only allow emerging star HB #22 to fill the void. He is a great combination of size and speed. DT #94 will clog the middle of the field as he looks to be one of the premier DTs in the Big Ten. ROLB #4 is a tackling machine and will help lead the Cornhuskers' defense to a Big Ten title.

Quick Pass

Shotgun Tight Slots—Stick

The quick flat routes are amazing options if your opponent likes to send pressure. Hit them quickly and hit them often.

Man Beater

Shotgun Tight Slots—Corner N Go's

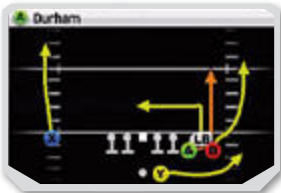

The slot routes first break to the sideline and then back over the middle of the field. Against man hit the quick flat route. If you are fooled wait for the route to break back over the middle of the field; the zone defense won't be able to defend the cutback.

Zone Beater

Shotgun Bunch HB Str—Durham

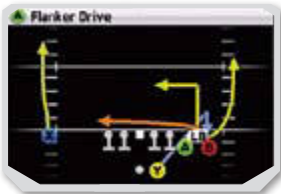

The alignment of this formation puts pressure on the defense. The HB out of the backfield is our number one option, but also look to the wheel route if the HB is covered.

Base Play

Shotgun Bunch HB Str—Flanker Drive

The blue route on this play helps in protection and then releases quickly to the short flat. Our first read is the drag over the middle of the field and then to the wheel route. Our safety valve is the delayed blue route.

TEAM INTRODUCTION

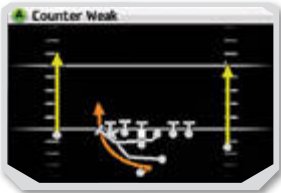

Despite getting off to a shaky start, the Virginia Tech Hokies took down the ACC crown last season and represented the conference in the Orange Bowl. Although they lost a speedy QB in the off season, the Hokies will still have plenty of firepower on offense. The defense will be stalwart again, starting with LOLB #51; look to keep him on the field all game. In the secondary, CB #20 has the speed to match up with any receiver in the nation. Since the defense will keep things close, look to get the ball to your playmakers. HB #4 and WR #81 will mesh with whichever QB you start behind center. One will give you a little extra speed while the other carries more smarts.

Shakes is a great play that has five quick throws available. Look to the C routes on the edge first, and if the defenders slide in, leak the ball out to the backs in the flat.

Man Beater

Strong I—Mesh

While Mesh is a common concept, this play is unique since the WR is on an automotion. The defender should stay a step behind, which will free up the WR over the middle.

Zone Beater

Ace Twin TE—TE Attack

The TE Attack play has a Trips formation to the right. The two inner routes both start out to the same area of the field before making great cuts. Look to isolate one defender and deliver the ball once your WR breaks to the middle.

Base Play

I-Form Tackle Over—Load Option

Since Tech has a few speedy options at QB, don't be afraid to use the option game. The Tackle Over formation in this year's game is very dominant. Look to get around the edge with your extra tackle and pitch to your star HB if needed.

The route out of the backfield to the HB is an amazing quick option when the defense brings pressure. Look to the crossing pattern and the TE wheel route as your next options.

Man Beater

TEAM INTRODUCTION

The Florida Gators will have a new coach at the helm this season. Thankfully, they return a seasoned QB and add some athletic backups to the roster. The Gators have the fastest man in college football with HB #2, so look to get him the ball in space early and often. With great depth in the back seven, including ROLB #43 and CB #1, the Gators have what it takes to be a popular team online again. They have a unique playbook and a plethora of WRs to rotate in the game. These WRs aren't big targets as in years past, but they all have game-breaking speed and shifty moves. Florida has a suspect line for the first time in years, but the defensive line is solid and will anchor the battle in the trenches.

Strong I Twins—Power Option

By clearing out some of your weaker players, Florida has the ability to break big runs with Strong I Twins. If QB #12 isn't fast enough around the edge on the option, feel free to use the backup QB package. Get to the edge as much as possible: Florida is a speed team, not a power one.

Quick Pass

Full House Normal Wide—WR Comebacks

By using the Full House to sub multiple threats in the backfield, we can alleviate tons of pressure off the linemen. Look first to the angle route, which will free up vs. man defense; if it gets manually covered, wait on the delayed route to release.

Man Beater

Shotgun Tight—HB Wheel

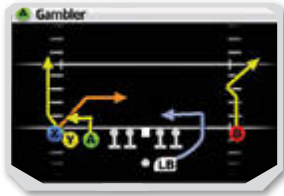

The Shotgun Tight formation is the perfect compressed set to beat man coverage. We can hit either crossing route over the middle, or if we get time in the pocket, we can let our speedy HB burn his defender and air it out!

Zone Beater

Shotgun Trips Open—Gambler

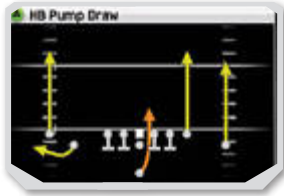

The Shotgun Trips formation allows us to stack our fast WRs on the sideline and create havoc. If the defender slides inside, look to drill a solid pass down the sideline. We always have the underneath route to the sideline that will get cleared out by the wheel.

Base Play

Ace Slot—HB Pump Draw

This play simulates a little bubble screen and should get the defenders moving outside. With the blazing speed of our HB, you can be halfway up the field before the defense realizes you handed it off.

A full overhaul to this mode has it back on top!

Road to Glory is the ultimate mode for the gamer who wants to create a personal storybook ending. Gamers start by creating their own player or selecting an already existing one. You can create this player to your exact specifications or make him unique. You can choose any position, but remember that the QB, HB, and WR are in on nearly all the action.

Which path will you take?

While setting up your player, you can choose from hundreds of different combinations. One of the new additions to the mode this year is the ability to play on both sides of the ball. If you want your player to be an "ironman" make sure to select a second position. Players will earn recruiting points for both positions, but keep in mind that schools will recruit you for different reasons. If you are a great QB, you may get offers from your dream school, but if you are only an average DB, you may get offers from schools with lower prestige. If you have your heart set on your dream school as a defensive back, you always have the option to walk on.

CAREER MODES

Find your hometown

Also new in Road to Glory mode this season is the ability to play a full schedule during high school. You can select how many games you want your high school campaign to last.

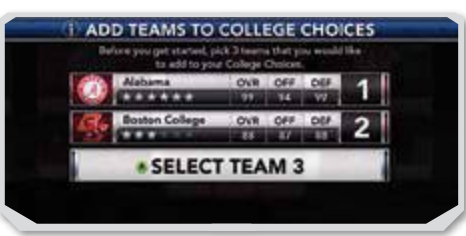

Become a legend

In the past, gamers only had the chance to run through the playoffs; now you have full customization of your opponents, schedule, and length of the season.

TIP Use Team Builder on the NCAA Football 12 website to create realistic high school opponents to play against!

Depending on the location of your player and what type of school/coach you want to play for, set up the teams that you are interested in. This is a great way to get some extra attention from the schools you are looking to earn scholarships from. Are you looking to run the option in college, or want to go someplace with warm weather? Don't forget this key step.

Where do you wanna go?

Once you start to excel in your high school games, you earn recruiting points that will help you become a more coveted prospect. To become a legend on your high school campus, make sure to follow your assignments on every play. With QBs learn how to read progressions and try to look for routes that will beat the defense. Don't be afraid to pick up stats in garbage time; numbers are numbers. If you choose to play as a running back, don't turbo when you get the ball; wait for your blockers to set up in front of you and then turbo through the hole. Outside runs have the ability to get more yards, but also can be hit in the backfield for negative gains. Straight-ahead runs can gain chunks of yards consistently but lack the threat to go the distance. The game AI does a good job this season of calling plays to get you in a position to succeed. Follow the play art more often than not and you will be well on your way to glory. As a WR, you can call for the football; only do this when you're open—your team will move the chains even if you're not open and you will get more opportunities to pick up stats by keeping drives alive. Look to block downfield, not only for your RB but for your receivers after the catch. You will quickly learn the routes that get you the most open and into space to make plays. Playing WR is one of the most rewarding experiences in NCAA Football 12.

Signing Day

Once you complete your high school season, it's time to choose where to write your collegiate legacy. If you earned a scholarship offer from your dream school, congratulations. If not, you still have the option to walk on at the school of your choice. Before choosing a school to spend four years with, take into account some factors:

- Does this coach have a track record of fulfilling his promises?
- What position on the depth chart will I start at?
- Is the team stacked at my position already?
- Does the team play a style that I think I can succeed in?
- Is this school close to home?
- What is the climate like? How are the facilities?
- Will this team get me closer to the ultimate dream of playing on Sundays?

Those are just a few of the factors that can make choosing a school so difficult. Once you select your school, you are no longer the big fish on campus. You will have to earn the coach's trust if you want full control over your destiny. Trust is an all-new feature in this year's game. The more you get from a coach, the more options you have on the field. By taking reps in practice, you will earn more points and move closer to getting on the field. Before you get a chance to start, you have to earn your spot in a position battle. This is a way to gain the trust of everyone on your team and prove to them you're worthy of representing your school's colors.

To add additional ratings to your player, the game was completely overhauled. There are tons of new boosts in this year's game. The old style of gaining bunches of XP and adding it to your attributes is gone. Now, there are more than 600 items available for in-game purchase. Each position has exclusive packs for you to buy that will boost unique skills. This is a very cool way to level up your player and one that will keep the game interesting for all four seasons. Plus, it now is great to play at different positions to find all the position-exclusive hidden boosts in the game. Thankfully, we spoke to EA SPORTS and got all the information for our Prima Game Guide buyers!

Behind The Scenes

at EA's NCAA Draft Party

So many football movies start with a group of misfits who can barely figure out how to put on pads in the first scene.

However, after some hard work, recruiting, and good coaching, the team gets the shot to win the big game at the end of the movie. Depending on how you choose to play Dynasty mode, this could be your reality. Managing all aspects of a college team, from scheduling to recruiting to your depth chart, can be a tall task. Thankfully, this season, EA SPORTS added the Coaching Carousel, which allows you to manage just one side of the ball to make sure you're ready for the national stage. Once you prove you can manage your duties as an assistant, you will have the opportunity to take on your dream job; this is where the true fun begins in Dynasty mode. Make sure to double-check on the expectations that your job entails; each program has different requirements.

The more prestige, the more pressure!

What's New?

Make sure to check this section out

Besides the Coaching Carousel, custom conferences are another new feature. You now can fully customize your conferences and spin college football on its head. You can even add new BCS affiliations to conferences. If you want the Mountain West winner to receive a berth in the Rose Bowl, you can make it happen. The game will even let you name your divisions! This will be very popular for online Dynasty mode; you can create mini four-team conferences or put 16 powerhouse school teams together! One other huge addition to the game is the ability to manage your entire dynasty online. You can now sim your games and call plays from your computer!

Team Select

Finding a team to embark on your journey with is something you should not take lightly. Here are some factors to consider when selecting your squad:

- Are you looking to maintain an already powerful squad or trying to rebuild a weaker team?
- How large of a conference are you looking to play in? Do you want to be in a BCS conference?
- How much pressure are you looking to take on early? Can you handle a few rough seasons?
- What type of recruiter are you? Do you need to rely on the school's brand or can you get players on your own?
- Which offensive style are you looking to employ? Is there a team that fits your scheme now?

CAREER MODES

- Do you want to start out as a coordinator? Look to a respected school with strong players in place.

After taking a few moments and searching through the teams, make your decision and get ready for greatness!

Here's a solid team that fits our defensive style

Other General Dynasty Tips

- Recruiting is the most important thing you can do off the field; make sure to manage your time with recruits.
- Don't be afraid to transition styles if your personnel start to favor a different style after a few years.
- Always look to redshirt extra players; that bonus year of development will pay dividends in the future.
- You can go against other schools by downplaying their offers—use this tactic only for highly coveted players.
- Create prospects for a fun way to follow friends through a career.
- Comb your entire roster for hidden ratings. Perhaps you have a WR with great throw accuracy whom you can sneak in a trick play with!
- If you are struggling to recruit or would rather just play games, set the CPU to assist you.
- Make sure to set your early season schedule and balance the strength of the schedule vs. easy wins. If you lose early you could drop from the title conversation.

- Always have one sure win on the schedule at home. This way you can invite all your biggest prospects to watch you dominate!
- Focus on players who fit your style; if you need a fast QB to make your scheme work, don't waste your time trying to impress pocket passers.

Dynasty Accelerators

Why wait? If you're looking for a quicker way to the top or if your goals are in danger of not being met, you can always pick up some downloadable content in the marketplace. These accelerators will give you an advantage against the competition and should give your team the edge it needs to compete at the highest level. These boosts can help anywhere, from recruiting to training your players.

Special thanks from Paul- To Zach and Steve (Gamer Media Inc.) or as they’re better known around the gaming community, ZFarks and SGibs, you guys really bring another level of expertise to the football gaming fans. Thank you! To Justin Dewiel for introducing us to Zach and Steve, we owe you. To my trusted mentor and good friend Donato Tica, thanks for the guidance and support. To Jody Seltzer and Deana Shields for your professionalism and speed getting this book to the printer. To Jessica Schuster and Randy Chase for helping us with anything we needed and supporting our successful partnership. I look forward to working with you again. Sports and videogames...what’s not to love! BBG!

Special thanks from the authors - First and foremost thank you for purchasing this guide. Both Zfarks and myself would not be here without the support we have gotten from you all. A very special thanks to both our families and friends! We would not have been able to accomplish this guide without their help throughout the years. And finally an extra special thanks to the Developers at EA Sports and Justin Dewiel. Good luck and happy gaming!
